National Strikes Over Relief Pay Feared by Green

N.Y. Walkout Due Today as Trade Unions Vote to Support It.

A. F. L. Chief Cites Unrest Elsewhere

$93.50 'Security Wage' Is Hit; Gen. Johnson Appeals to Men.

The Labor Situation.

Walkout of several hundred workers on WPA projects in New York was seen by President Green of the A. F. L. as a possible forerunner to strikes in other large cities against the "security wage."

A general strike on all WPA work in New York was on as a result of support voted by the city's building trade unions in spite of a vigorous plea by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, WPA director for the city.

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 8.—Spread of the New York work relief strike to other large industrial centers was predicted tonight by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

"We already have received reports of widespread dissatisfaction with the security wage," Green said. "Strikes are thretaened in Boston, Chicago, Kansas City, Cleveland, San Francisco and Seattle.

"Hands-Off" Policy.

"We tried to avoid this when we offered the McCarran amendment with the suggestion that the prevailing local hourly wage be paid on relief projects, with monthly earnings limited to the security wage figure."

The federation maintained a "hands-off" policy toward the New York strike.

"There doesn't seem to be anything we can do," Green said.

J. W. Williams, president of the federation's building trades department, recognized by Green, reiterated his position that the city could not stop the strike. He said, however, that he understood Harry Hopkins, Federal works relief administrator, might take some steps soon.

Green said that the federation's executive council, holding its quarterly meeting here, "expresses great satisfaction" upon hearing that the postoffice employes' 40-hour-week bill had been sent to the White House.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 8.—Delegates from most of the city's building trade unions voted tonight to support a general strike on all Works Progress Administration projects throughout the five boroughs.

The strike, set for tomorrow morning, was agreed on as a protest against the Federal Government's "security wage" scale of $93.50 a month.

Action was taken despite the pleas of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, vigorous-speaking works progress administrator for the city.

Broadcasts Appeal.

After attending the executive session of the labor union delegates, Gen. Johnson hurried to a broadcasting studio and addressed an impassioned appeal to organized labor in a last-minute effort to avert the strike.

Blaming Communists for the strike move, he urged: "Don't do it, boys. Don't let yourselves be used to foul your own nest and play a sucker's game."

Declaring 1,250,000 "helpless and hungry people" depended on the city's 100,000 WPA workers, Gen. Johnson declared:

"If it succeeded 100 per cent, the only thing this strike can do is to destroy the strong position of labor, return all workers to the dole, and leave skilled builders at the mercy of contractors in the bargaining struggle."

Johnson termed "fantastic and foolish" the union men's argument that private contractors might use the WPA wage scale as a lever to force down wages generally.

Hardest hit by the walkout was

Leads Divorce Race

MRS. RUTH N. STEELE.

Divorce Rush Opened Under Easier Terms

Seven Wives File Papers With Lawyers in Race for 'First' Honors.

Taking advantage of the District's new divorce law, which changed materially the requirements for obtaining an absolute divorce here, seven wives yesterday petitioned the District Supreme Court for divorces. All based the suits on the liberalized provisions of the act, which was signed by President Roosevelt Wednesday night.

A merry race for the distinction of being the first to file a suit under the changed law was staged by Raymond Neudecker and Jean M. Boardman, attorneys. To the former actually went the title, but his friendly rival claimed the distinction of being the first to file an original proceeding, Neudecker's suit being based on an action pending in the District Supreme Court. Both attorneys filed their suits before the court officially opened at 9 o'clock.

Desertion Case First.

Mrs. Dorothy V. Quesada, 1932 Jackson street northeast, appeared as the complainant in the first case. She charged Irving G. Quesada with deserting her in 1931. She obtained a limited divorce in 1934, which she hopes to develop into a full divorce.

Italian Minister, Six Killed in Plane

Ship Crashes in Desert on Flight to Eritrea.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Aug. 8.—Seven Italians, including a cabinet minister and a famous explorer, were killed last night in an airplane crash on the Egyptian desert while on an inspection flight to Eritrea.

Three passengers and four members of the crew of the commercial plane met death in the disaster, which did not become known until today because the scene was far from any habitation.

They included Luigi Razza, 43, minister of public works and one of Mussolini's chief lieutenants, and Raimondo Franchetti, 46, the explorer.

Concern over the failure of the plane to arrive at Massaua, Eritrea, led to a search for it by British Royal Air Force pilots who found the wreckage.

House Votes Double Leave To All Clerks

Vacation and Sick Bills Pass Easily Without Record Ballot.

To Senate Next Week; Action Retroactive to July 1.

By James D. Secrest.

By an overwhelming majority the House yesterday voted to restore 30-day vacations and to allow a standard 15-day cumulative sick leave for all civilian Government employes. The action followed an hour and a quarter debate. No record votes were taken.

The companion bills now go to the Senate, where prompt consideration is promised by the Senate Civil Service Committee. No serious opposition is foreseen and it is possible the measures may become law before the end of next week.

Despite previous indications of objections to the leave bills, Chairman Ramspeck, of the House Civil Service Committee, actually had little trouble persuading the House to adopt the law. The only outspoken opponent was Representative Rich (Republican), Pennsylvania.

Retroactive to July 1.

The bills, when enacted into law, will be retroactive to July 1, but the double vacation period will be of little value this season. Instead of accumulating 1¼ days a month, Government employes will be allowed 2½ days.

The standardized sick leave bill cuts the sick leave of most employes in half, reducing it from 30 to 15 days, but compensates by permitting employes to accumulate it up to 120 days, an advantage not now allowed. The sick leave also is extended to some departments at present denied the privilege.

A dozen members, from both sides of the House, took the floor to speak for the bills, and amendments designed to reduce the benefits were shouted down.

Rich Fights Alone.

Rich was the sole supporter of his amendment to make the vacation leave 20 days instead of 30 and of another proposal to make the permissible 30-day sick leave upon order of administrative heads without instead of with pay.

Representative Young (Democrat), of Ohio, who also raised some objections to the bills, was similarly defeated in his amendments to change the word "leave" to "vacation" and to combine both the vacation and sick leave bills to prevent possible failure of the latter.

Committee amendments exempting temporary employes on construction projects, paid on an hourly basis, were adopted for both bills.

About 300 postal employes in the mail equipment shops and custodial service also were exempted upon Ramspeck's motion because they have been included in the benefits of the 40-hour week bill for postal employes.

Ramspeck said the measures will benefit about 350,000 permanent and temporary executive department employes over the country, more than 100,000 of whom reside in metropolitan Washington.

He predicted that passage of the measure will incur no additional Federal expense, as employes double up during vacation periods and work harder during 11 months than they would otherwise in 12 months.

Opposition Is Hooted.

Rich and Young challenged the prediction that the legislation would cost the Government no more money.

"If it doesn't cost the Government more money," said Young, "then there are too many Federal employes now."

Ramspeck explained that under the present vacation system Government employes often get only a few days' actual vacation, since from 7 to 10 days of the 15 allowed often are consumed in time off to go to banks, to dentists, attending funerals or on other private affairs.

Reviving his old battle cry of "balance the budget," Rich attacked the bill amid jeers and hoots from his colleagues. He and Representative Keller (Democrat), of Illinois, engaged in a shouting cross-examination over how much each

Mass Meting in N.Y. Asks U. S. Withdraw at Once From Berlin Games.

The German Situation.

Immediate withdrawal of the United States from the 1936 Olympic games in Berlin was demanded by 15,000 persons at a mass meeting in New York last night.

A German delegate to the Third Internationale's congress at Moscow urged communists and churchmen to join hands in the fight on Nazidom.

Hitler continued his dissolution of veteran organizations, adding sweeping decrees against Jews and Free Masons.

By the United Press.

New York, Aug. 8.—Immediate withdrawal of the United States from the Olympic games to be held in Berlin—hitherto only discussed in athletic circles—tonight was demanded by 15,000 supporters of the Anti-Nazi Federation in a spirited mass meeting in Madison Square Garden.

The alleged "barbarous, medieval murder and torture of the Hitler regime" was scored in a resolution adopted unanimously by the cheering spectators.

The federation's resolution was addressed to Avery Brundage, chairman of the American Olympic committee, and Jeremiah T. Mahoney, president of the Amateur Athletic Union.

It called upon the A. A. U. not to certify its athletes for participation in the Berlin tourneys.

Propaganda Aim Seen.

"The Olympic games are being used by the Hitler regime," the resolution said, "to advance its political-economic aims, which are a menace to the advancement of peace or progress, and as an avenue of propaganda.

"The great financial returns from the games will strengthen the Nazi regime.

"The foundations of the Hitler regime, its principles and practices are violation of the cardinal ideals of sportsmanship expressed in the Olympic oath and code.

Scouts' Rally Is Canceled By President

Roosevelt Will Address Youths Instead; Huge Outlay Insured.

As a purely precautionary measure President Roosevelt yesterday canceled the Boy Scouts' world jamboree here because of infantile paralysis in two epidemic centers within 100 miles of this city.

From 30,000 to 35,000 Scouts were to be here August 21 to 30 for the jamboree.

Twenty-five hundred were ready to leave the West Coast yesterday and were stopped by telegram. The Virginia Scouts canceled their own trip yesterday.

Approximately $200,000 had been spent in preparation for the event, principally in great camps, now nearly ready for use. The preparations were insured against "loss of use," and apparently there will be no loss to the organization.

Rebates will be made to the 25,000 boys and officials who had contributed $25 each to defray the expenses of the gathering, it was announced.

The decision to cancel came yesterday after a long conference between the President and Surgeon General Hugh S. Cumming, Commissioner George E. Allen and Chief Scout Executive James West.

White House Explains.

A White House statement issued with the announcement of cancellation said:

"The President was advised by the Surgeon General, Commissioner Allen and Dr. West that the decision reached by the conferees was based on the prevalence of poliomyelitis in two epidemic centers in Virginia, within 100 miles of the District of Columbia, and the increased prevalence in other sections of the country. While this prevalence was not considered to be unduly alarming, the conferees decided it would be in the best interests of the Scouts and all concerned to cancel the jamboree."

At the same time the President agreed to address by radio the Scouts and their leaders in their respective camps throughout the country. The address will be made at 8 p. m., Eastern standard time, August 21.

Only a week ago the officers and Commissioner Allen, after a four-hour conference, announced that they did not consider the number of infantile paralysis cases here sufficiently high to warrant cancellation of the jamboree.

Surgeon General Cumming, at the time said he had "no reason to believe the presence of 25,000 Boy Scouts would have any effect upon the incidence and spread of poliomyelitis in Washington or the neighboring States or among the Scouts themselves."

He added:

Statement of Cumming.

"The past experience and movement of epidemics of poliomyelitis and the manner of the spread of the present epidemic give no special cause for apprehension of its spread into the metropolitan population of Washington."

That Commissioner Allen did not entirely concur in the decision, but had put the matter squarely to the health authorities, was indicated in what he said after the announcement:

"I deeply regret the necessity of this decision. But if the public health officers say there is any danger to the public health, then I agree the jamboree should be called

Senate Votes Gold Bill, Speeds Adjournment; Tax Rebellion Spreads

Wealth Levies Face Stiff Fight In Senate Debates Next Week

Finance Democrats Fear Measure Too Radical; La Follette to Lead Progressive Effort to Raise Rates, Cut Exemptions.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Efforts to rush the President's "share the wealth" tax bill to the Senate floor next week will be started today when the Finance Committee meets in executive session to consider redrafting the measure after 9 days of public hearings in which the bill was subjected to scathing attacks by business spokesmen.

The last of these attacks came from Ellsworth C. Alvord, former congressional and Treasury tax lawyer but now speaking for the United States Chamber of Commerce. He assailed the proposed excess profits tax, written into the measure by the House, as "capricious, inequitable and uncertain," as "violating all principles of taxation normally accepted as sound" and as "penalizing conservatively-managed enterprises and discriminating against them in favor of inflationistic corporate finance."

As soon as the hearings closed the bill became a target for criticism on the Senate floor, even though formal debate on it will not start until next week. Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, contended that the proposed inheritance taxes would drive the Ford Motor Co. "into the hands of Wall Street, or its equivalent; and the money-changers, who have striven vainly in years past to achieve this end, and whom this Administration says it proposes to drive from the temple, will have been handed the dominion which in no other manner could be obtained."

Vandenberg confined his attack for the day day to the inheritance tax section of the measure and illustrated his objections by the effect of this new levy on the Ford company. In the last few days it has become increasingly clear that opposition is mounting to the inheritance tax section, which has been assailed as "confiscatory" and impossible of equitable administration.

But whether this opposition will be sufficient to strike out the proposed inheritance levies is not known. Several efforts will be made to moderate the proposed rates, while several members of the Finance Committee assert they are convinced that the administrative provisions for the tax must be rewritten in order to prevent injustices.

Indeed, at least five Democrats on the Finance Committee are in Amended Ban on Suits Receives Approval of McAdoo.

Social Bill Report Adopted by House

Committee Will Settle Private Pensions Altercation.

By Robert C. Albright.

Cutting corners leading to adjournment, the Senate yesterday rushed to passage the President's gold clause bill, conferees reported the Administration's vast social security program, and the House without further ado adopted the report.

Adjournment was in the air and every important development pointed to a late August get-away, after one of the longest and most gruelling sessions in recent years.

The gold bill, barring dollar-devaluation suits against the Government, beginning six months after enactment, was passed by the Senate, 47 to 24, when an outspoken and bi-partisan opposition suddenly recognized the futility of further debate.

House and Senate conferees on the President's social security program reached tardy agreement after an overnight decision to drop the Clark amendment, exempting companies operating private pension systems from the compulsory retirement tax.

Committee Named.

Desire to adjourn was a factor in this agreement, too. Recognizing that some plan can be worked out for preserving private pension plans, but unwilling to hold up the conference until this can be done, a special committee of both Houses was appointed to devise a plan before the next term of Congress.

House approval of the social security report was perfunctory and is expected to be followed by equally speedy Senate action today or tomorrow.

After passing the gold clause bill, the Senate plunged into consideration of Senator David L. Walsh's Administration bill to impose NRA wage and hour regulation upon all industries dealing with the Government, or dealing with States or other subdivisions in business financed by Government money.

Administration leaders said they can pass it today, despite determined opposition from a group representing many of the old NRA antagonists. Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, led the offensive against it, with a motion to refer it to the Finance Committee. This failed by a 45 to 25 vote.

The Missourian then announced he will move for complete substitution of the Black 30-hour-week bill for the Walsh measure.

A significant announcement reflecting pressure being brought to bear for adjournment was made by Representative C. G. Binderup (Democrat), of Nebraska, on leaving the White House. Binderup said a revised draft of the $3,000,000,000 inflationary Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing bill will be given status next session.

A similar understanding early this week on bonus legislation had won from House and Senate veterans' blocs the promise not to press the bonus this session. Recently, Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, had indicated the Frazier-Lemke bill would be offered as a banking or tax bill rider unless assurance was given of a vote next session.

Opposition Fades.

The conference report on social security legislation, embodying unemployment insurance, old-age pensions and a wide program of public health aids, was in line with the increasing melting away of seemingly hopeless conference disagreements. Early this week conferees on the AAA amendments reached an understanding. Broad conference differences still remain, however, on the TVA amendments, the banking bill, and the utility holding company bill—the latter

Guerrilla War Terrorizes Toulon as Naval Wage Riots Spread.

By the United Press.

Paris, Aug. 9 (Friday).—Three were dead and hundreds of wounded littered the streets of Toulon last night after steel-helmeted troops fired on workers demonstrating in protst against Premier Pierre Laval's drastic economy decrees, wihch reduced their wages.

One was dead at Brest, where workers carrying red flags and shouting "The Internationale" began two days ago the bloody battles which Thursday night had spread to Paris, Toulon, L'Orient, St. Nazaire, Le Havre, Cherbourg and other ports.

With Toulon and Brest under martial law, further disorders were feared.

Ominous calm was restored at Toulon after midnight when naval authorities provided giant electric lights to illuminate narrow streets from which desperate arsenal workers had kept up a fusillade against Government forces.

Demonstrators had plunged the city into darkness Thursday night when, fleeing from Cavalry charges and infantry, they wrecked lamp posts and severed electric lines.

Stone pavings hastily torn up, were thrown together as barricades. Officials said 17 demonstrators are hurt so seriously they may die.

[An Associated Press dispatch from Paris said a state of siege was reported proclaimed early today at Toulon, but confirmation was lacking. Officials denied the reports and said they had arrested 50 persons, including the left-wing member of the Toulon Municipal Council, and a city councilman from nearby La Seyne, as well as a number of North African laborers and eight workers at the naval arsenal.]

Panic reigned for hours in Toulon. Women and children were trampled as cavalrymen made saber

Hopkins-Ickes Clash Forced Mackall to Quit

Interior Secretary Called Maryland WPA Head 'Irresponsible.'

By Felix Bruner.

Long-standing differences between Secretary Ickes and Harry L. Hopkins, head of the Works Progress Administration, resulted in acceptance of the resignation of John N. Mackall as works progress administrator for Maryland, it was revealed yesterday.

Mackall, who in his official position had no connection with the PWA, was attempting to give the impression that he was conducting PWA operations, as well as WPA operations in Maryland, according to Secretary Ickes.

Ickes yesterday referred to Mackall as "highly unreliable." Hopkins said that he had accepted his resignation with reluctance and that the situation was a "personal matter." He declared that "I like Mackall very much."

Mackall had twice written to Hopkins declaring that he was not interested in conducting work similar to the old CWA, but that he believed works projects should be useful. He was quoted as having said that he had submitted a program, but that Ickes had failed to approve it. The PWA representative in Maryland is Abel Wolman, who will have charge of projects involving construction costing more than $25,000. Francis M. Dryden succeeds Mackall.

With Mackall out, Ickes readily consented to the program first presented by the resigned WPA State administrator, but which Ickes insisted had never been formally proposed. Following a conference attended by Senators Tydings and Radcliffe, Mayor Jackson of Baltimore, Ickes, Hopkins and Wolman, it was announced that the program for the State had been finally approved and that work would start immediately.

Asked about the Maryland situation, Ickes replied that "I suppose

G-Women.

THE woman who knows more than any other member of her sex about the inside dope on tracking down kidnapers, murderers, and other public enemies, believes G-women would be a flop.

"They couldn't do the work," said gentle, brown-eyed Helen Gandy, private secretary to J. Edgar Hoover ever since he became director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in 1924. Recently Hoover mentioned the possibility of women agents being added some time to the staff of investigators.

"I don't mean they couldn't keep their mouths shut, although that seems to be the general impression of them," said Miss Gandy in her small, soft voice.

"They could keep secrets all right," she continued. "But they just aren't strong enough. I don't think a woman would be much good at climbing over roofs and doing all the other things our agents have to do."

She never reads crime stories for the same reason. She likes peaceful biographies. But there is little time for reading.

Most of her time is spent in the thick of things at the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Kidnap cases, she admitted, stir her most, especially if there's a youngster involved. Whenever there's a man hunt on she gets all upset.

"I'm not so curious as worried," she confided. "I'm always worried about the safety of the agents. After all, I know most of them and I know the risks they run. Mr. Hoover is always terribly concerned for his men, too—just as concerned as he is over the capture of the criminals."

Helen Gandy entered Government work in feverish war time, when everybody was flocking to Washington. She had just finished high school in southern New Jersey, "where small towns are strung like beads on a ribbon." She began as a messenger in the Department of Justice. She taught herself to type, to take dictation. And when J. Edgar Hoover was made head of the Intelligence Division of the Bureau of Federal Investigation several years before he took charge of the bureau, she was assigned to his office.

Not long ago Hoover, in referring to her, said:

"She is the real backbone of this office."

When Helen Gandy heard of the remark her brown eyes crinkled.

"Floating rib is more like it," she said.

Arizona Indians in Uprising, Demand 'Firewater'; 15 Jailed

By the Associated Press.

Yuma, Ariz., Aug. 8.—A craving for forbidden 'firewater" and belief the Government's new home rule plan exempted them from arrest by white officers were blamed by Sheriff T. H. Newman tonight for an Indian "uprising" reminiscent of the days of the tomahawk.

Fifteen Mohave tribesmen were in jail—nine here and six at Parker—while Federal county officers investigated the outbreak, the first serious trouble between red men and whites in Arizona in nearly 20 years.

A human skull mounted on a stick, found on the property of Constable J. A. Joplin, was regarded by white officers as a grim warning that the feeling among the Mohave braves had not subsided.

The "uprising" flared at Parker Saturday night when Deputy Sheriff Jim Washum arrested a Mohave tribesman on an intoxication charge. About 30 braves, armed with clubs and stones, attacked Washum in the main street of Parker and freed the prisoner.

Constable Joplin went to Washum's aid. A squad of deputy sheriffs from Yuma went to Parker Sunday and restored order. The 15 Indians were taken into custody.

Sheriff Newman said a belief had developed among the Indians that with acceptance of the Government's new tribal "home rule" plan they had a right to obtain intoxicants.

Foulois, Target in Air Inquiry, To Quit Army After 37 Years

Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, 57-year-old chief of the Army Air Corps, who has been a target of criticism from members of the House, will quit military service and return to private life, it was stated at the War Department yesterday.

Leaving the service voluntarily on completion of 37 years of active service, his action brings to a close the long controversy between members of the House Military Affairs Committee and War Department officials over methods of procuring military aircraft.

Gen. Foulois will go on a three-month leave September 22 and upon its termination will be placed on the retired list. Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover, the present assistant chief, will succeed him as acting chief until a permanent selection is made by President Roosevelt.

Westover, who became brigadier general when he was 49 years of age, is one of the world's outstanding balloonists. He won the National Balloon Race at Milwaukee in June, 1922, and has competed in international events as this country's representative.

He came to Washington in 1922 as director of Air Corps production. Two years later he served at Langley Field, Va., as executive officer and later as commanding officer. He received the Distinguished Service Medal for meritorious war-time service.

G. O. P. Advises States to Defy U. S. on Tokens

Rep. Christianson Criticizes 'Bureaucrats;' Drive for Act Renewed.

By the Associated Press.

A Republican suggestion that States "defy the bureaucrats in Washington" and issue their own sales tax tokens yesterday accompanied a renewed Treasury drive to obtain midget money legislation from an apparently hostile House.

The "defy" advice was given by Representative Christianson, of Minnesota at a House Coinage Committee hearing. Shortly afterward Attorney General Cummings said the Government would not proceed legally against State token systems at least until Congress ruled on the Roosevelt-Morgenthau plan for Federal one-mill and half-cent pieces.

Earlier, Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, said an informal poll indicated "overwhelming opposition" to the fractional-coin bill because members feared it might furnish an "entering wedge" for a Federal sales tax. But Cummings said he thought the legislation would be passed.

Four States Warned.

The Treasury has notified Illinois, Missouri, Washington and Colorado that State issuance of tokens violated the exclusive Federal right to coin money. Secretary Morgenthau said yesterday the Justice Department backed that opinion.

When Forrest Smith, Missouri State auditor, took the House committee stand, he told Christianson that Missouri's 1 per cent sales-tax law becomes effective August 27 and asked "your advice," in view of the Federal attitude.

"I'd defy the bureaucrats in Washington and put the issue up to the Supreme Court," the Minnesotan retorted. "They've been wrong up here 90 per cent of the time, and the chances are they are wrong in this case."

C. M. Hester, assistant general counsel of the Treasury, said he would prepare a brief he believed would convince Christianson of the Treasury's "sound position" in ruling against State tokens.

Christianson Retorts.

"Perhaps as sound as the position of the Department of Justice in some of the cases submitted to the Supreme Court," Christianson commented.

Hester told the committee Federal coinage of one-half cent and one-mill pieces was "higly desirable" because 23 States and New York City have sales tax laws, 17 of them on a straight percentage basis.

Representative Fiesinger (Democrat), Ohio, who presided in the absence of Chairman Somers (Democrat), New York, said he did not know when the committee would hold its next hearing, but hoped it would be soon. It has tabled one midget coin plan.

Asked his opinion of the committee's attitude, Fiesinger said:

"It's getting pretty late in the session."

Morgenthau said mint officials had advised him it would require several months to manufacture the square and "doughnut" midget coins designed by President Roosevelt, and that circular coins would be used meanwhile if Congress votes the authority.

Balky Witness Halts Inquiry On Chain Store

Lyons Bases His Defiance on State's Rights and Threatens Suit.

Obdurately refusing to answer questions put to him by the Patman chair store investigating committee, Robert W. Lyons, representing large chain store interests, yesterday forced an adjournment of the puzzled House group, ith the members completely baffled for the time being by the witness' tactics.

Lyons invoked the principle of States' rights to jurtify his action, and threatened to sue for a court injunction, when Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, started to read from a record obtained from Lyons' files.

The amazing thing as that Lyons got away with it, temporarily at least, where similar behavior by Harry F. Sinclair, Col. L. H. Britten and William F. MacCracken before Senate committees brought quick citations for contempt.

Patman Silent on Plans.

Patman was silent on what the House Committee plans to do. After 20 minutes of executive consultation, Lyons was called back before the committee and told that it had not yet been decided what course to pursue. The committee, Patman said, would look further into his refusal.

Lyons said he represented the Woolworth, Kresge, Kress, Penny, Walgreen and nine lesser chains, and emphatically denied the right of the committee to ask him questions on his activities for the chains. The committee is attempting to show that chain stores pool their advertising power and use other methods to attempt influence of newspaper policy.

Lyons contended that his relations with his clients were confidential and protected by law. He insisted his activities had no connection with Federal legislation, nor with matters in which the Federal Government had the power to legislate.

No Bills Concerned, He Insists.

The committee made no attempt to question the ground on which Lyons stood. It was the Supreme Court's contention in the Sinclair and MacCracken cases that Congress has the power to punish for contempt only on refusal to respond to questions or submit data on matters concerned with the framing of legislation. And the witness said his activities had no concern with such matters.

He denied that he had an annual budget of $375,000 for use in influencing State legislation, but even here he challenged the right of the committee to investigate what that budget is.

When Patman asked him if he hired persons with political influence to deal with State Legislatures, he declined to answer. Later, when Patman started reading a paper purporting to show contributions made by chain stores to defeat unfavorable legislation, he threatened the injunction suit. Following the committee's executive session, however, he examined the paper, and said he had no objection to its publication.

Allows Files to Be Kept.

To Lyon's statement that he surrendered his files voluntarily, Patman retorted:

"We would have taken the files under subpena anyway, if you had not surrendered them. But we appreciate your co-operation. May we keep them?"

First making the reservation that the committee could not make public anything not leading to prospective legislation, the witness consented.

It was Patman's contention that Congress could legislate to regulate or prevent his activities in the States.

"If we find a man sitting here in Washington," said the Texan, "and using a big chain store budget to send matter through the mails for a socially undesirable purpose, we certainly can investigate to see whether the use of the mails for such purposes should be prohibited. I presume you won't dispute our right to do that?"

Complicated Question, He Replies.

To which the chain store representative replied:

"It's a complicated question I can't answer offhand, but I don't think you can probe into any work I am doing."

Lyons agreed to come back voluntarily before the committee today, but took issue with Patman's statement that he was under subpena.

The witness said he changed his office from New York to Washington merely because he preferred to live in the Capital. He said he had made no contacts with any branch of the Federal Government.

paid employes in his private business.

"I don't know of any manufacturing establishment that gives 30 days' vacation with pay or 15 days' sick leave with pay," Rich declared.

All Workers Included.

Keller predicted that Government employes will "do more and better work in 11 months than they would in 12 months" and forecast an ultimate 6-hour day for all industry.

Representative Marcantonio (Republican), of New York, in a labor speech, asserted that the Government should set the example for private industry by "being a just, fair and humane employer."

He was followed by Chairman Connery, of the House Labor Committee, who recalled that private employers reduced wages when the economy act cut the salaries of Government employes 15 per cent in 1932. He suggested that the extra leave period might also be followed by industry.

Restoration of the 30-day vacation leave will wipe out another chapter, one of the last, of the 1932 economy act.

Both measures cover employes of any corporation created under authority of an act of Congress which is controlled or owned by the United States Government, whether or not its employes are paid from funds appropriated by Congress.

Esther Penn, national secretary of the American Federation of Government Employes, said: "I regard the passage of the bill the most advanced step since the enactment of the first classification law." She said all credit was due Chairman Ramspeck and members of his committee.

"The House acted constructively in passing the annual and sick leave bills," said Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes. "It is hoped that they will be given speedy and favorable action by the Senate."

5 Million Lobby Laid to Utilities In Fight on Bill

Black, Head of Senate Quiz Asserts in Broadcast Consumers Must Pay.

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Black (Democrat), Alabama, of the Senate loby committee last night predicted the power industry's fight against the utilities bill "will be known as the $5,000,000 lobby."

With the record far from complete, he said in a radio address, expenditures of $1,500,000 have been revealed. Repeatedly he asserted that ultimately the users of gas and electricity must pay that bill.

"Contrary to tradition, against the public morals and hostile to good government, the lobby has reached such a position of power that it threatens government itself," Black said. "Its size, its power, its capacity for evil, its greed, treachery, deception and fraud condemn it to the death it deserves. You, the people of the United States, will not permit it to destroy you. You will destroy it."

Lawyers to Be Called.

The Senator's speech, reviewing in detail the evidence laid before the committee, closed a day which saw top-flight stars of the legal profession who were retained by the power companies in their campaign against the utility and other legislation given conspicuous places on the committee's prospective witness list.

They included John W. Davis, the Democratic Party's 1924 presidential nominee; Newton D. Baker, President Wilson's Secretary of War; Henry L. Stimson, President Hoover's Secretary of State, and James M. Beck, former Republican Solicitor General and Representative.

The committee wants to know, members said yesterday, how much the power companies paid them in fees and the exact nature of their activities. It wants too, if possible, to draw a difficult line showing where legal practice ends and lobbying begins.

Black said that "probably more than 250,000 telegrams were sent to Washington opposing the utilities bill, signed in most cases, he asserted, without authority, and "paid for by the utilities companies."

This, he insisted, was intended to give members of Congress the impression that a veritable storm of popular opposition to the measure had arisen and "to try to persuade or coerce them to vote against" the Wheeler-Rayburn bill.

Black also said the record showed that, in addition, the utilities officials sent to Washington "close friends" of the congressional membership, political leaders and in some instances their campaign managers in an effort to defeat the measure."

Cites Court Ruling.

Black turned a Supreme Court opinion into condemnation of the activities of the utilities interests From the case of Marshal vs. The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, he read:

"Any attempts to deceive persons in connection with the high functions of legislation, by secret compensations, or to create or bring into operation undue influence of any kind have all the injurious effects of a fraud upon the public. * * *"

"These words of the Supreme Court of the United States denounced a $50,000 lobby," Black said. "Can we doubt what that court would say today of the high-powered, deceptive, telegram-fixing, letter-framing, Washington-visiting $5,000,000 lobby?"

The day found Howard C. Hopson, dominant figure in Associated Gas & Electric, still eluding the would-be subpena servers of the House Rules Committee, which also is investigating lobbying for and against the utilities bill.

Chase Given Up.

The investigators of the Senate Committee had given up the chase, expecting that in good time Hopson would appear voluntarily. The sleuths of the House, however, were still busy running down various unproductive tips that he might be found in nearby localities.

The attention of the Senate committee was directed to the legal profession's part in recent legislative battles by testimony on Wednesday from Patrick J. Hurley, President Hoover's Secretary of War, and Joseph P. Tumulty, President Wilson's secretary.

Hurley said his firm received $25,000 from Associated Gas, and Tumulty testified to fees totaling $33,000 from several power companies, all for activities in connection with the campaign against the utilities bill.

The former Secretary of War, denying he had done any lobbying, said his activities consisted of arranging an appointment with the House Interstate Commerce Committee for a utilities official and rendering an opinion holding the utilities bill unconstitutional. Tumulty, with a smile, said he had acted as a "legislative interpreter."

Davis Gave Opinion.

From Tumulty the committee learned that Davis rendered an opinion on the constitutionality of the utilities bill for a power company. In the committee's record, too, were statements that Beck and Baker, acting in collaboration, had prepared an opinion holding most aspects of the Tennessee Valley Authority to be unconstitutional, for which they received $35,000. The Commonwealth and Southern Corporation recently made public an opinion on the utilities bill prepared by Stimson's New York law firm.

Committee members made it plain that while the first objective was assembling a total of expenditures against the utilities bill and disclosing the nature of all activities in that connection, they were much interested in the ethical considerations where the legal profession was concerned.

Of the commitee's five members, four—Chairman Black (Democrat), Alabama, and Senators Gibson (Republican), Vermont; Minton (Democrat), Indiana, and Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington—are lawyers. The fifth member is Senator Frazier (Republican), North Dakota.

Senate Gets Bill to Rule Commodity Exchanges

By the Associated Press.

Early Senate action on the commodity exchange bill appeared likely yesterday as the Agriculture Committee reported it out, conditioned, however, upon exemption of cotton exchanges.

The bill passed the House June 3 and since then had been dormant in the Senate committee.

An agreement was reached to report the bill out of the committee for passage provided House leaders would in turn agree to the cotton provision. Conferences were scheduled over the week-end on the issue.

Senate Passes Gold Suits Ban By 47-24 Vote

appearing the most threatening to early adjournment.

The Administration-sponsored Guffey coal bill still remained to be taken loose from the Ways and Means Committee, but leaders have hopes.

Following the social security conference report, Chairman Pat Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee appointed the following Senators to serve on the joint committee to work out tax exemption for private pension systems: King, of Utah; George, of Georgia; Clark, of Missouri (Democrats); Keyes, of New Hampshire (Republican), and La Follette, of Wisconsin (Progressive). Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee appointed himself, Samuel B. Hill, of Washington, and Cullen, of New York (Democrats); Bacharach, of New Jersey, and Treadway, of Massachusetts (Republicans).

Differences on the social security bill were ironed out in conference with the following provisions:

A social security board, independent of the Department of Labor, to administer the act.

An old-age pension plan under which the Federal Government would contribute $15 on a matching basis with States, and a self-supporting retirement plan for which employes and employers alike would be taxed.

Stipulation that employes benefiting under the old age assistance plan must retire on reaching 65.

Aid to States having constitutional barriers in the way of matching Federal old age pension grants, providing they set up State agencies to administer the funds.

Permission for the States to set up their own unemployment insurance plans, with a choice between the so-called "Wisconsin plan," State-wide pools, etc.

Requirement that employers of eight or more persons for any 20 weeks in the year must be taxed under the employment insurance plan.

Pensions for the blind, with $15 Federal monthly contributions, on a matching basis.

Amendment Killed.

The Clark amendment, exempting for the tax employes and employers under private pension systems, was eliminated only after a prolonged fight, in which the Administration contended it would lay the act open to constitutional objections and ultimately break down the Federal old age fund by depriving it of younger contributaries.

The Senate yesterday passed the gold-clause bill without need of the debate limitation they had obtained on the previous day. Republicans and Democratic conservatives called the measure, which blocks suits for recovery on gold-clause securities, "repudiation of Government obligations." Senator William G. McAdoo, of California, however, who had taken a similar stand in committee, spoke for the bill on condition it carry his modifying amendments, permitting suits for six more months. The amendment was approved.

On passage of the bill, 47 Democrats, 4 Republicans, 1 Progressive and 1 Farmer Laborite voted for it, while 15 Republicans and 9 Democrats voted "No."

The measure probably will go to conference with the House, which debarred all recovery suits, without any time extension.

Meantime, Senate leaders were having their troubles pushing through the Walsh bill, imposing NRA wage and hour regulations on companies doing business with the Government.

Senator Clark charged the bill was "an attempt to do what the Supreme Court said was unconstitutional, and business doesn't want."

NRA Plan Charged.

"No matter what you may say," Clark told the Senate, "this is simply an attempt to revive the corpse of NRA."

To which Walsh retorted:

"It is nothing of the kind. It is merely saying that money that comes out of the public treasury won't go to chiselers."

Walsh charged efforts were being made "to delay this bill until the tax bill gets in here, in hopes of defeating it."

The Massachusetts Democrat said it wasn't his bill but was offered at the request of the Administration. Amendments by Walsh restricting the scope of the bill to three years, and by Senator Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, excluding agricultural enterprises from its operation, were adopted.

On the other side of the Capitol, Chairman Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, will make another effort today to break a committee stalemate on the Guffey coal bill. A majority of the committee now is on record against it, and Doughton may propose modification to break the deadlock. A rapid check by leaders of House sentiment, still uncompleted, developed strong floor opposition to the measure.

Binderup's call at the White House in behalf of the Frazier-Lemke bill, and his subsequent prediction that the bill will pass next session, followed a favorable House Judiciary sub-committee report on another Frazier-Lemke measure—a redraft of the farm debt moratorium bill passed last session and held unconstitutional.

Selassie Faces East in Search Of War Sinews

Rumors of DealWith Japan Strengthened by Agent's Secret Mission.

The Italo-Ethiopia Crisis.

Desperately in need of munitions and other war supplies, Ethiopia yesterday was seen turning to Japan for aid, planning to send an agent on a secret mission to that country. Japan, meanwhile, announced it would open a legation at Addis Ababa about January 1.

Premier Mussolini ordered utmost secrecy to surround maneuvers of more than 500,000 troops in northern Italy this month.

Great Britain still awaited an answer from Italy to representation on anti-British press attacks.

French officials were continuing plans for the tripartite conference August 16 in an effort to settle the East African dispute.

By the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, Aug. 8.—Developments in the Italo-Ethiopian dispute lent strength today to the growing belief that Emperor Haile Selassie is turning to the Orient for munitions the rest of the world thus far has denied him.

Daba Birrou, a former foreign office official, will leave soon for Japan on a secret mission, which was believed connected with getting credit for munitions and foodstuffs for conducting a war.

A lack of supplies is becoming more evident daily as outlying troops pour into the capital to get equipment, only to find none is available.

Legation Rumored.

Coupled with this development was a report (officially confirmed in Tokyo) that Japan would establish a legation there about January 1.

[The Tokyo announcement said plans to create the legation were not connected with the Italo-Ethiopian crisis, but were a result of Japan's growing commercial connections with the African kingdom.]

All the war ministry's available supplies were doled out to troops passing through Addis Ababa a fortnight ago. Other troops are being concentrated outside the capital while Haile Selassie and his councilors desperately comb the world for credit and equipment.

Announcement of Birrou's mission followed official denials that Japanese military contracts already have been arranged. This led to the belief that while the denial was technically true, it failed to cover the possibility such contracts might shortly be negotiated and concluded.

Hopes of Peace Fade.

Mussolini's action in calling up new divisions for dispatch to East Africa was interpreted in informed quarters as finally wrecking the much-dimmed hope for peace. But publicly Haile Selassie continues to base hopes on the League of Nations that his country will yet be saved from the sword.

Most Ethiopians, however, regard war as inevitable. Open discussion of the duration, manner of the campaign and its outcome has been street gossip for days.

The German legation denied rumors that Gen. Hans Kundt, former commander of the Bolivian army, was in Ethiopia to join the army.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Aug. 8.—Premier Mussolini gave strict orders today that gigantic military maneuvers to be held near the Brenner Pass this month be kept secret, following unconfirmed reports Italy has made great strides in developing offensive weapons hitherto unknown. More than 500,000 men will take part in the war drills.

Il Duce gave his orders for secrecy in response to queries from foreign correspondents for the privilege of witnessing the maneuvers.

"No form of newspaperman will be allowed," said his spokesman, who laughed when asked if photographers would be allowed.

One of the arguments of Europe against Mussolini's African plans has been that he cannot send great contingents to Africa without bleeding to death the Italian army counted upon by England and France to exercise a "stabilizing influence" in European politics, particularly to preserve Austria's independence against Nazi Germany.

For each one of the seven regular army divisions ordered to East Africa he has created replacement divisions. Meanwhile, he has created extra divisions of Blackshirt militia and expects to have 1,000,000 men in the field by October.

A government spokesman asserted today Italy needs no help, "financial or otherwise," from abroad in her Ethiopian problem. He denied reports Rome has sought cotton credits in New York.

Paris, Aug. 8 (AP).—Plans of Premier Mussolini for huge maneuvers in northern Italy stirred but failed to alarm negotiators today who are seeking to avert a war.

Premier Pierre Laval was busy with domestic troubles, but a staff is evolving tentative plans for conversations here August 16 between England, France and Italy.

The problem, officials said, is to find a formula for Italian economic domination of Ethiopia with enough political control to satisfy Mussolini but not too much for Ethiopia to accept.

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 8.—A fortnight after "strong representations" to Italy, Great Britain tonight was still without assurance that violent Italian press attacks against this country would be halted.

Statements of a spokesman of the Italian foreign office that he knew of no such British action caused amazement in official quarters here.

Although verbal weight of Europe's organized workers has been thrown behind a "stop the Italo-Ethiopian war" movement, a check-up tonight indicated this attitude would not be backed by concerted action in several countries.

A manifesto adopted by organized European workers last night called upon them to join the American Federation of Labor in the program.

No responsible officials of the International Federation of Trades Unions and the Labor-Socialist Internationale could be found who would say their viewpoint would be backed by action such as world-wide workers' demonstration for peace or a boycott of the belligerents.

The French labor union was described by Paris leaders as too busy opposing Premier Laval's deflationary decree laws to protest Mussolini's threat of war against Ethiopia.

Germany has no labor unions, but it was believed the labor front would not act, because the government seems to want Mussolini engaged elsewhere than in central European politics.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 8.—David Darrah, the Chicago Tribune's Rome correspondent, who was summarily banished from Italy because his dispatches displeased Premier Mussolini, returned today with Mrs. Darrah. "I was given only three hours to get out of Rome," he said.

Darrah said the Italian people do not want war with Ethiopia, adding that if Mussolini's program fails "it will be his finish as a dictator."

"He would like to get out of it if he could without losing prestige," the newspaperman said. "I don't know where the money is coming from. I think they will have to pay for it (the war) by inflation."

Roosevelt Gets Praise, Blame By Carolinians

Talmadge, Blease Lead in Attack Cut Defense Is Vigorous.

By the Associated Press.

Jolly Street, S. C., Aug. 8.—Vigorous criticism and warm praise were heaped upon the Roosevelt Administration today as Georgia's Governor Eugene Talmadge, outspoken critic of the President's policies, and a host of South Carolina political figures addressed Jolly Street's picnic rally.

The site since 1888 of an annual barbecue and political rally by South Carolinians, the school grove was thronged by 2,000.

While Talmadge was joined in his criticism by former Senator Cole L. Blease, State Senator Carroll D. Nance and Col. William Harllee, of Dillon, the President's leadership was just as vigorously defended by Gov. Olin D. ohnston, Gary Paschal, Columbia attorney, and J. C. Metts, principal of the Jolly Street School.

Talmadge Applauded.

Newberry and Richlaand County textile workers organizations Sunday adopted a resolution condemning the invitation for Talmadge to speak here, and there were rumors in this section that the Georgia Governor might receive an unfriendly welcome.

However, he received from the crowd, which included many Georgians, a respectful hearing and much applause.

Fireworks weref urnished largely by Blease. The white-haired former Governor and Senator kept the crowd under the spell of his platform art and wit throughout, at times drawing whoops an dcheers.

Praises Supreme Court.

His criticism of the President was by inference.

"I know that the Democratic Party is favored by the Lord," he said. "I know he loves the people of this Nation. I need cite no other reason than that there has not been any vacancy on the Supreme Court of the United States within the past three years and I sincerely hope there will not be any for some time to come."

Talmadge followed his usual vein in assailing the Administration and its "brain trusters" who he said beggary" to break the Constitution.

Talking to the cotton mill workers of this textile manufacturing section, he said, 10,835,284 square yards of Japanese bleached cloth were imported this year as compared with 8,043,845 for all of last year, and attributed the increase to New Deal policies.

'Black Eagle' Starts War All His Own

Addis Ababa, Aug. 8 (UP).—Hubert Julian, Harlem "Black Eagle," and John Robinson, Negro Chicago aviator now in the Ethiopian flying corps, staked their own private war in a hotel lobby today because of an anti-Julian article in the Amsterdam News, New York Negro newspaper.

Julian, who is all set to fight for Ethiopia if only Emperor Haile Selassie will risk his planes, struck Robinson. He grabbed a chair as a shield when the Chicago pilot reached for a table knife. Police intervened in time to avert bloodshed.

The "Black Eagle," self-commissioned colonel, accused Robinson of inspiring the Amsterdam News article.

Schultz Will Face Bigger Tax Demand

State Drops Charge, Will Press New Proceedings.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 8.—Convinced they had grossly underestimated Dutch Schultz's earning power, State income tax authorities today spiked their $37,000 delinquency assessment against him and prepared to make newer and bigger demands

At the moment this decision was reached the former Bronx beer baron was tucked away in a Bridgeport, Conn., hotel room, sleeping away the fatigue of a night out.

"One of his representatives made the very bold statement that we probably hadn't assessed Schultz one-third of what he should have been taxed," Tax Commissioner Mark Graves said. "We began a hurried investigation and reports received this morning indicate newly discovered evidence that the tax should be much higher than that which was levied."

Accordingly, Graves said, it was decided to drop the proceedings that had called for Schultz's appearance in Supreme Court.

Fess Sees Democratic Victory in '36 Voting

He took the long view toward 1940 for Republican success.

Virginia Plans Change in Law Ruling Carriers

State Regulations Will Be Made to Conform With Federal Act.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 8.—The General Assembly of Virginia will be called upon at its next session to amend State laws to conform with the Federal motor carrier act, which passed Congress Monday and awaits the signature of the President to become law, H. Lester Hooker, of the State corporation commission, said today.

What specific changes may be recommended to the Virginia Legislature will be decided after State officials confer with members of the Interstate Commerce Commission, probably after Congress adjourns, Hooker said.

The State corporation commission probably will have more regulatory work and the State will receive a little more revenue from motor carriers, because of more efficient enforcement as a result of the act, he predicted.

The act gives the Interstate Commerce Commission authority to regulate both passenger and freight service of motor companies engaged in interstate business.

A clause specifically states, however, that the I. C. C. is not to interfere with the "exclusive regulation of interstate commerce" by the States, and is to have no power "to prescribe or in any manner regulate" any intrastate rate or charge "for the purpose of removing discrimination against interstate commerce or for any other purpose whatever."

The act also provides that a company operating in not more than three States is to be regulated by representatives of the States concerned, whose orders are to be binding, unless reviewed by the I. C. C. on complaint or on its own motion.

The marriage will be celebrated in the chapel of St. Leonard's Castle, the Windsor home of Horace E. Dodge, Mrs. Baker's brother. He was divorced from his first wife, Clorinda Lockhart, six months ago at Reno.

Chinese Flood, Rains Maroon 200 Foreigners

Foochow, China, Aug. 8 (AP).—Another typhoon, sweeping torrential rains before it up the Min River Valley and exacting a heavy toll of life and property, marooned 200 Americans and Europeans in the Kultiang Mountains today. Fukien Province and the south China coast suffered most.

The stranded Occidentals were summering in the hills 10 miles west of Foochow.

Heavy damage from wind and water was reported at the American Methodist properties in Sienyu, 100 miles to the south.

Colombia 'Quakes Continue; 50 Dead

Hundreds of Homes Collapse, Wires Down.

By the Associated Press.

Bogota, Colombia, Aug. 8.—Continued earth movements were reported today in western Colombia where an earthquake killed more than 50 persons Tuesday and did wide-spread damage.

Dispatches from Pasto, capital of Narino province, said municipalities which bore the brunt of the shock were Yacuanguer, Funes and Tangua. Hundreds of houses collapsed and others were damaged, leaving the inhabitants homeless.

A persistent downpour of rain made rescue work difficult. Telegraph lines were damaged, preventing complete details from reaching the capital.

The affected area lies near the border of Ecuador. Pasto is world-famous for its manufacture of Panama hats.

changed for the worse, and persecution and discrimination have been and are inflicted not only upon Jews but also upon labor organizations, Catholics, Protestants and members of the African race, thereby abrogating all pledges and promises of the Hitler government to the American Olympic Committee."

Cable Sent Hitler.

A police detail of 250 had little to do except keep the throng moving into the arena.

The assemblage also cabled Reichsfuehrer Hitler demanding the release of certain political prisoners. Another message was addressed to Secretary of State Cordell Hull, protesting the Nazi arrest of Lawrence Simpson, an American seaman.

William Bailey, one of the defendants in the arrests arising out of the stripping here of the Nazi swastika from the mast of the liner Bremen, also was a speaker at the mass meeting. Dr. Kurt Rosenfeld, former Prussian minister of justice, was on the platform.

Representative Vito Marcantonio (Republican), New York, who was a scheduled speaker, sent a message from Washington regretting his inability to attend.

Moscow, Aug. 8.—The unusual proposal that Communists ally themselves with churchmen for a fight to overthrow the Nazi regime was presented today to the Seventh Congress of the Third Internationale

F. Walter, the German delegate, said Communists are prepared to unite with Catholics in a fight against Fascism in Germany.

"We told the Catholic workers we are ready to fight with them for freedom of conscience, as we have one common enemy—Fascism," Walter declared. He predicted a united front government in Germany "after the fall of the Nazi."

Ring of Steel Urged.

Harry Pollitt, of England, urged "lovers of freedom in France, England and America" to help overthrow the Nazi. "We call upon them to encircle the Nazi hell with a steel ring!" he shouted.

Pollitt said death sentences passed in Germany on the Communist leaders, Rudolph and Albert Kayser, was the first time "even Fascist courts" had decreed death as a punishment for political beliefs and that the Internationale is organizing "a strong movement" to rescue them.

The Chinese delegate, Wang Ming, said growing "military economics and political imperialism in Latin America has endangered the national existence of a number of semi-colonial nations."

A spokesman for the American Embassy denied a report (not carried by the Associated Press) that any protest was in preparation here against speeches at the congress referring to the United States. The embassy is studying carefully the text of the speeches and is reporting regularly to Washington.

Berlin, Aug. 8.—Hitlerism's fight against state "enemies" brought sweeping decrees today against World War veterans' organizations, Jews and Free Masons.

The heated political feeling was shown in a fight of youths near Krefeld. Fifteen boys, aged about 15, members of the Hitler youth organization, were set upon by youths described as "rowdies" when returning on bicycles from a meeting in Essen. A Hitler youth leader was seriously injured and another less seriously hurt. Secret police said they had arrested the assailants

Stahlhelm Dissolved.

Veterans' Stahlhelm, or "Steel Helmet" organizations were dissolved in Berlin, Brandenburg, Pommerania and Eastern Mark by order of secret police. Property of the formations was seized. An official communique said the groups were rallying points of both reactionaries and Marxists who oppose the Nazi regime.

Steel Helmet National Headquarters said the dissolutions do not affect the national organization, which still exists. Through repeated dissolutions, however, its membership has dwindled.

On Saturday the last Masonic lodges in the Reich will be dissolved, the Voelkischer Beobachter, Hitler's newspaper, announced.

Jews' Plays Banned.

The Jewish culture bund in Berlin was forbidden to arrange stage performances by Aryan German dramatists, including the classics of Goethe, Schiller and Lessing. They may, however, produce plays by Shakespeare and other foreigners.

Jews were forbidden to use public baths at Kamen, Bielefeld, Cottbus, Bad Hoenningen and other places. Three Jews were arrested at Potsdam on charges of racial turpitude. The institution for studying Germanic culture forbade Jews to visit excavations of ancient remains.

An authoritative source said today there was a possibility of serious deficiencies in certain German food supplies.

A definite shortage of fruits exists, it was said, with prospects of vegetable crops doubtful. Staples such as bread, grain and meat were described as being in a good position, but prices are rising steadily and the working man has difficulty in getting what he wants. The people are worrying.

Troops Mow Workers Down In French Riots

charges against demonstrators. Workers, seeking refuge in working class district houses, turned to guerrilla warfare. Snipers from windows and roof tops shot at police and soldiers who returned the fire.

The city was in tumult as throngs scurried before charging soldiers, mounted and in armored cars. Shots rang through the night and the skies were reddened by flames by striking arsenal workers.

Wounded in several ports totaled hundreds, but an accurate check was impossible. Hospitals were crowded, but many of the wounded had been carried off by their comrades for private treatment.

Police, fearful that Communists would agitate disorders in cities still quiet, made wholesale arrests.

Here in Paris the cabinet met with Laval and President Albert Lebrun. The ministers drafted additional economy decrees which were signed by the President after a council meeting at the Elysee Palace. The decrees are part of Laval's effort to keep France on the gold standard.

With war department permission, the Toulon police prefect summoned troops from Marseille and sharpshooters from the local barracks to reply to the sniping of workers barricaded on housetops and behind darkened windows in the working-class districts. Police encountered difficulty replying to the fire of snipers because panic-stricken workers milled aimlessly through the narrow, darkened streets.

Lights burned late at the ministry of the interior, where officials compiled reports from the trouble zones for Laval, who watched developments with President Lebrun from the Elysee Palace. Officials feared serious casualties unless the Toulon snipers were disarmed and their ammunition stores confiscated.

After approval by the council of ministers, Lebrun signed 41 decrees. They are designed to stimulate economic activity, defend savings accounts and reduce living costs. Other decrees begin a policy of replacing quotas by the tariff system. Certain quotas for agricultural products are repealed.

Fresh difficulties at Le Havre again delayed departure of the steamship Champlain with 670 passengers for New York, including many Americans. The crew of the Champlain agreed to call off their strike after workers' delegates in Paris obtained assurance from the ministry of merchant marine their grievances would receive serious consideration.

Late tonight, however, agitators aboard the Champlain, asserting the delegates to Paris conceded too much, forced continuance of the strike affecting the liners Normandie, Lafayette and Champlain. Workers will meet again tomorrow to consider further strike plans.

Strikers at Toulon began sniping from house windows in the working class districts after fighting all day with police and mobile guards.

Sniping plunged Toulon into panic after a spirited charge by mounted Republican guards in the Place de la Liberty. It climaxed several charges by steel helmeted armed guards against arsenal workers. The city later was plunged into darkness when strikers smashed lamp posts in efforts to hamper operations of the police and military.

After police opened fire many demonstrators dispersed. But darkness made it difficult to determine whether they were rallying for new manifestations. Toulon, like Brest, was ruled by martial law. Troops rumbled through the streets in armored cars.

At centers not yet affected by strikes and demonstrations, troops boarded trains ordered to speed them to reinforce guards at the Brest, Toulon, L'Orient, St. Nazaire, Le Havre and Cherbourg danger areas.

In Paris police precautions were increased against possibility of violent outbreaks in sympathy for the embattled workers in naval ports.

'Living Death' Terms Decreed In Lang Killing

One Woman Weeps, Other Smiles as Judge Directs 180-Year Sentences.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 8.—A "living death"—imprisonment for 180 years each—was the penalty imposed by Judge Cornelius J. Harrington today on the two middle-aged women who plotted and executed the "torso" murder of Ervin Lang.

Mrs. Blanche Dunkel, whimpering 44-year-old mother-in-law and mistress of the victim, and flippant Mrs. Evelyn Smith, 46-year-old former burlesque dancer, termed by the judge partners in one of the most callous crimes in the history of the city, heard him announce their fates in contrasting moods typical of their recent attitudes.

One Near Collapse.

Mrs. Dunkel was in a state of near-collapse, but Mrs. Smith stared boldly at the crowd of nearly 500 persons—mostly women—who filled the courtroom for the finale of the weird drama of passion and smiled at the photographers, apparently relieved that she had escaped the electric chair the State had asked for both.

Death, Judge Harrington said to the defendants, "would be a merciful end for you." He added that under the penalty he decreed both would be "suffering a living death."

He directed that on each July 6—the anniversary of the strangling of the 28-year-old grocery clerk, whose attentions to a younger woman aroused the furious jealousy of the mother of his dead wife—the women were to be placed in solitary confinement. He also ordered that Mrs. Dunkel might not be paroled until she had attained the age of 104 years nor Mrs. Smith until she had reached 106 years.

Reactions Differ.

Led back to their cells, the pair differed widely in their reaction to the sentences, which the judge said would "forever remove both from society" and would constitute "constant, hourly, daily and yearly reminder of the consequences of your act during the balance of your lifetimes." He termed Lang's slaying "one of the most vicious, premeditated assassinations of a human being coldly plotted and unfeelingly executed."

"I'm glad it's over," said Mrs. Dunkel, still weeping, "but I never expected that much. I expected about 20 years. The State promised me a break if I co-operated with them. The State double-crossed me."

Mrs. Dunkel, arrested several days after the crime, confessed she hired Mrs. Smith to slay her son-in-law for $500, of which she paid $100.

Smoking a cigarette, Mrs. Smith said: "I thank the judge for what he's done. He couldn't do otherwise. The verdict was O. K. with me."

Warden Frank Sain, of the Cook County jail, said tonight a close watch would be kept over the remorseful Mrs. Dunkel, lest she attempt to take her life.

Miss Josephine McKinley, 21, who was to have married Lang this autumn, said when informed of the sentences:

"I'm glad it's all over. I had no desire for revenge. All I wanted was justice for Ervin's death."

Filene Rallies Following Relapse Earlier in Day

Moscow, Aug. 8 (AP).—Edward A. Filene, 75-year-old Boston merchant, who is seriously ill with lobar pneumonia, suffered another slight relapse this morning, but later rallied in what doctors termed a satisfactory manner. The physicians said they were optimistic, but that their patient was not out of danger.

Prof. Fritz Meyer, German heart and lung specialist, is expected to reach Filene's bedside tonight after a trip from Germany by airplane.

Witness Denies Part in Plot to Slay Dickinson

Girl Says Confession Was 'Put Into Her Mouth' by Detective.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Aug. 8.—Jean Miller declared on the witness stand today that she had nothing to do with the slaying of Howard Carter Dickinson or the robbery plot which preceded it. The robbery netted $134.

She asserted that her statement to Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea, directly charging that the shots which killed the New York attorney here June 26 were fired by William Lee Ferris, was 'put into my mouth" by Detective Earl Switzer.

Ferris, Florence and Loretta Jackson, and the Miller women are Jackson, and the Miller woman are by each that the attorney was killed in lonely Rouge Park as part of a plot to obtain money to start a "tent" show have been introduced in evidence.

The Miller woman, accused on cross-examination of "acting," slumped suddenly out of the witness chair, falling on her face. A doctor said the defendant was in hysterical condition.

Another interruption occurred when a defense attorney complained that an investigators for McCrea was "smiling" during the Miller oman's testimony.

During the ensuing argument between counsel, the judge excused the jury, allowing it to return only after he had reprimanded the attorneys and issued an order against all "snickering, sneering and smiling" by court officers.

"Did you see Ferris shoot Dickinson?" a defense attorney asked.

"No, but I heard the shot after he had left the car," Mrs. Miller replied.

McCrea attacked her testimony that Detective Switzer had "coached" her in making the statement on the promise she would be used as a State witness against the other defendants.

"You mean to say he put this whole long description into your mouth?" the prosecutor demanded, pointing out that it filled five pages.

Mrs. Miller testified that she knew nothing concerning Dickinson's visits to Detroit as attorney for the estate of the late William H. Yawkey.

"As a mater of fact you never saw him until about 8 o'clock the evening of June 26 and were with him but three hours before he met his death. Isn't that so?" her attorney asked. She replied that it was.

Amazed Visitors Have Garner as Chauffeur

By the Associated Press.

County Attorney James English, of Douglas County, Nebr., and Clarence Spier, of Omaha, told yesterday of having the Vice President call for them to drive them to Wednesday night's Nebraska beefsteak dinner. Were they amazed?

Invited by Senator Burke, of Nebraska, to join the affair to test the merits of beef against Maine lobsters, they had no means of reaching the scene of the dinner, in the country, north of Washington.

"I'll send the Vice President or someone around to pick you up," Burke said.

They thought it was a joke until Mr. Garner arrived.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 8.—An automatic pistol which police said may be the weapon with which Howard Carter Dickinson was slain in Detroit, last June 26, was found by youths today on the South Side.

Officers learned of the discovery when one of the boys accidentally shot himself in the left arm while attempting to unload the pistol, a .32-caliber automatic.

C. V. Allnutt, 58, Leaps to Death From N.Y. Span

Bank Official, Formerly of Rockville, Had Been in Ill Health.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 8.—Claude V. Allnutt, 58, of Stamford, Conn., a vice president of the Irving Trust Co., leaped to death today from the George Washington Bridge.

The body landed in Washington Park. Several motorists informed authorities they saw Allnutt climb to the railing, on the Manhattan side of the bridge, and jump.

At the main office of the Irving Trust Co. a spokesman said Allnutt had been on leave of absence for the past seven months because of illness. The bridge from which Allnutt leaped is the world's largest suspension bridge. It spans the Hudson from 179th street, New York, to Fort Lee, N. J. Since the bridge was opened in October, 1931, 32 people have committed suicide by leaping from it.

Allnutt was born at Rockville, Md. He is the son of the late Henry Clinton Allnutt, register of wills in Montgomery County for many years. He is a graduate of the Montgomery County High School at Rockville and the University of Maryland.

When Mr. Allnutt finished college, he was employed for a few years at the Montgomery County National Bank. Later he went to work for a New York bank and served for five years as manager of its branch at the Isle of Pines in the West Indies.

He is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Leigh Choate, of Rockville; his mother, Mrs. Josephine Veirs Allnutt, of Rockville; three daughters, Misses Catherine and Wilhelmina Allnutt and Mrs. Veirs Choate Brown; two sons, John and Henry Allnutt; two brothers, Cecil A. and George A. Allnutt, of Rockville, and a sister, Mrs. Annabelle Buck, of Cincinnati.

U. S. Cleans Up O'Malley Gang In Capture of 4

2 Couples Taken in Ozarks Remnant of Kidnapig, Robber Band.

By the United Press.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 8.—Capture of four persons, said to represent the remnants of the Walter (Irish) O'Malley gang of St. Louis, second only to the Barker-Karpis group in bank robbery and kidnaping outrages, was announced today by Federal agents.

Agents seized Virgil (Red) Milton and his wife, Maxine, and Fred and Lucille Davis in an early morning ambush in the Arkansas Ozarks near Harrison, Ark.

Arrest of O'Malley recently was followed by an intensive hunt which uncovered the hideout of the Milton and Reese couples. O'Malley is serving a sentence for the abduction of August Luer, Alton, Ill., banker.

Agents said the arrests cleaned up robberies and extortions which brought in between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 to gang members. E. E. Controy, agent in charge of the Kansas City office, led the raiding party.

He brought the quartet to the Kansas City county jail. Milton and Reese were known as principal lieutenants in the O'Malley band.

A lonely fishing camp at the junction of White River and Bee Creek, about 45 miles north of Harrison, was scene of the capture. When Milton and Reese awoke they found themselves under the muzzles of riot guns and sub-machine guns and surrendered without ado.

The trail was picked up after an agent of the Department of Justice went into the Ozarks region where the gang members were suspected of maintaining headquarters. He gained the confidence of associates of the gangsters and led other agents to the ambush.

Another Gang Abducts Kidnaped News Writer

Peiping, Aug. 8 (AP).—Hopes for the speedy release of Gareth Jones, correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, were diminished today when the British Embassy was advised that a second group of bandits now held him prisoner. Jones was kidnaped about a month ago.

Sources in Kalgan, which the embassy believes reliable, said that the second group of bandits had increased the ransom demand to 100,000 Mexican dollars, about $38,000.

Virginia Hogs At Highest Price In Last 5 Years

1935 Production Expected to Net Raisers Total of $4,500,000.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 8.—The highest hog prices in five years promise to put around $4,500,000 into the pockets of Virginia raisers during 1935, an increase of about 75 per cent over the $2,738,000 aggregate of 1934.

Not only is the farm price about double what it was this time a year ago, but pig production is estimated at 760,000 for 1935, as compared with 672,000 last year. AAA payments probably will total about 60 per cent of the $1,107,000 received during the previous year, because of the difference in current contracts drawn under improved conditions.

The gross revenues anticipated by hog raisers in Virginia this year still lack a lot of equaling the $9,901,000 of 1929, records of Henry M. Taylor, State-Federal statistician, show, but the price of pork-on-the-hoof has virtually reached parity—that point at which the hog-revenue dollar will buy the same amounts of others things as it did in 1926.

Market quotations on hogs this week hovered around 12 cents a pound. United States Department of Agriculture estimators predict that the upward trend will continue for at least 60 to 90 days, and the price probably will remain relatively stable for perhaps six months.

Officials at the State department of agriculture credit the AAA program of pig slaughter with major responsibility for the hike in price, but also point out that the high price of corn, resulting from last summer's drought in the Midwest, is exerting a considerable influence.

fifth street northwest, was the second to take advantage of the new law. She also, the papers showed, holds a limited divorce and she asked the court to sever completely the bonds which now make her legally the wife of Howard B. Thomas. The couple separated in 1929, and Mrs. Thomas obtained a limited divorce in 1933.

Desertion in 1932 was cited by Mrs. Ruth N. Steele, 128 Eleventh street southeast, as a reason why she should be granted a divorce from James Steele.

In quick succession suits were filed by Robert Lynch for Mrs. Octa B. Winter, 835 Allison street northwest, who claimed desertion; Mrs. Frances C. Collier, 2520 Tenth street northwest, who alleged Ambrose E. Collier had been sentenced to prison for possession of counterfeit money in 1933, and Mrs. Elizabeth G. McCurdy, 3033 Sixteenth street northwest, who obtained a limited divorce in 1925 from Albert J. McCurdy, jr.

The seventh suit was filed by Boardman for Mrs. Catherine A. Milstead, 2920 N street northwest, who charged her husband with leaving on his vacation five years ago—a vacation from which, she said, he had never returned.

Under the new law desertion for five years, a limited divorce for two years and conviction of a felony are made grounds for an absolute divorce.

Body of Youth Found at Base Of the Yosemite

Socialite Parents of Victim Arrive by Plane at Colorado Camp.

By the Associated Press.

Camp Crief Ouray, Colo., Aug. 8. A shrill whistle from Lindbergh Peak—prdearranged by weary searchers—tonight announced the apparent discovery of the body of William Brode, 15-year-old Memphis Y. M. C. A. camper.

The blast came as the boys' parents, socially distinguished Mr. and Mrs. Julian Brode, of Memphis, flew over the glacier-chiseled peak in a chartered airplane and landed at the ranch of the late Harry Knifht.

A few minutes after the Brodes' plane ended the hazardous mountain jurney, the parents were told of the signal.

Man Descends Pit.

Searchers said they were certain the whistle was blown by Baker Armstrong, of Houston, Tex., crack mountain climber who descended the 100-foot "chimney pit" where the boy fell.

Search-worn wen predicted that it would be several hours before the body could be removed from the pit and brought down the steep cliffs.

Brode, well-known Southern cottonseed products manufacturer, immediately mounted an awaiting pack horse an da guide started with him up a perilous 15-mile trail to the base camp. The sorrowing mother warned against the horseback trip.

Flaunted Death.

Armstrong, searchers said, flaunted death when he entered the pit where nervous Robert Henderson, 15, of Omaha, Nebr., cried to rescue parties that his companion had toppled.

Weary and distraught, the parents were flown to this pinnacled country by Col. Carlos Reavis, seasoned Denver mountain flier. He dashed with his monoplane to Falcon, Colo., earlier when the Brode's chartered plane was forced down by motor trouble whichc delayed their anxious westward flight from Memphis.

Recovers From Fall.

Yosemite, Calif., Aug. 8 (AP).—Physicians reported a slight improvement today in the condition of Robert Tate, 35, who with Miss Elizabeth Lorimer, 23, of Chicopee, Mass., was marooned overnight on a ledge 2,000 feet above the floor of Yosemite Valley.

X-rays disclosed Tate suffered a fractured shoulder and a slight skull fracture besides contusions and shock. His doctors, refusing visitors, said he had not been questioned.

Miss Lorimer, after 12 hours' sleep, was up and about today, bantering with other residents of the resort camp.

Detroit, Aug. 8 (AP).—A delegation of more than 250 Detroit and Hamtramck housewives, chanting "strike yells," which ended with the words, "Packers, packers, boo, boo," called on Detroit packing houses today to demand that meat prices be reduced 20 per cent.

They threatened to continue their boycott on meat unless the demand is met. The caravan was good-natured, and police did not interfere.

A delegation, headed by Mrs. Mary Zuk, presented the demand while the main body of the demonstrators, shouting noisily and carrying placards demanding lower meat prices, marched outside.

President Cancels Jamboree Of Scouts Due to Paralysis

off. I yield my judgment to that of the health authorities."

The announcement came after a day of intensive activity, for Boy Scout officials had said when the question of infantile paralysis first came up that it was imperative they get a final decision no later than yesterday.

Allen had conferred with the President's committee on the jamboree and with health officials twice before the trip to the White House.

Situation in Washington.

Figures on the infantile paralysis situation here, as obtained at the District Building yesterday, are:

There have been 23 cases here since January 1, 15 of them since July 1, 5 since August 1. Some of them, said District health officers, came from Maryland and Virginia.

Dr. George H. Ruhland, District health officer, has deprecated fears that the epidemic centers in Virginia and Maryland may spread to the District.

Harvey Gordon, of New York, national director of engineering service for the Boy Scouts, said the jamobree has been "officially wound up."

All that remained, he said, was to clean up and salvage the camp.

Only one Scout has arrived in Washington.

He is Alford Hoffner, jr., 15 of Springfield, Pa., who hitchhiked here. He is a member of Troup No. 1, Sharon Hill, Pa., where he formerly lived. He has been working as a water boy at the Boy Scout Camp in Arlington County and will stay until the camp is dismantled and by that time will probably have earned enough money to ride home on a train or bus.

There are 5 miles of tents and buildings in 20 sections of an average of 65 tents to a section at the camp.

Five Miles of Tents.

Three hundred and fifty men have been working, setting the camp up. These include laborers and Scout executives.

Four people have been working on the job since last November.

They are Gordon and his wife, Wallace McBride and R. H. Bryan, both of New York City, members of the National Scout staff.

No Scout from foreign countries have yet reached Washington, but Scouts from the Philippines, Hawaii, Japan and China have reached America and are on sight-seeing tours at present.

No Scouts were due until August 17.

Mrs. Vanderbilt Vows Long Fight

Says She Won't Give Up Till She Regains Daughter.

Southampton, England, Aug. 8 (AP).—Mrs. Gloria Vanderbilt arrived in England today and announced with flashing eyes, "From now on everything in me is going to be devoted to a fight—a fight I will never give up until I get my baby back."

She accused her sister-in-law, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, who recently was awarded partial custody of Mrs. Vanderbilt's daughter Gloria, of "running a baby farm down on Long Island."

"She already has three children, eight grandchildren, and now demands Gloria," the mother said. "Gloria is the one who has really been hurt. The last time I saw Gloria, just before I sailed, I asked her if she hated me and she said: 'No.'

"I asked her if she knew she had lied about me being neglectful and she said: 'Yes.' That she did it because she liked her little playmates at the Whitney home."

Mermaids Have Nothing On 'Quints,' Says Dafoe

Callander, Ontario, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—The Dionne quintuplets are "born swimmers,' 'and already are learning their strokes in "man-sized" bathtubs, Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe said today.

Marvin Nelson, star marathon swimmer, offered his services as swimming instructor for the 14-month-old babies.

"They can swim," the doctor told him.

Nelson was surprised.

"Sure, they can," Dr. Dafoe said. "All except Marie, and she isn't quite strong enough."

Luigi—Remember how we said a Pierce Arrow would be just the car we wanted for that long run. Well, there is a '35 advertised on the page opposite the comics this morning for only $848.

Damage in Ohio Floods Is Set At 3 Millions

Raging Rivers Recede After Causing Heavy Losses to Property, Crops.

Flood and Heat Toll.

While Ohio and West Virginia were counting the cost of Wednesday's flood at $3,000,000, rising waters continued in Wisconsin.

Heat, too, took its toll, 5 more more deaths sending the total to 158—being reported in the Midwest.

By the Associated Press.

Coshocton, Ohio, Aug. 8.—The tumultuous waters of the Muskingum River, gorged from overflowing tributaries, swept into southeastern Ohio tonight with damage in their wake unofficially estimated at $3,000,000.

No official estimate of the damage has yet been made. However, State, city and county officials who have toured the stricken regions agreed the estimate is approximtaely correct.

Two major feed streams—the Tuscarawas and the Walhonding—began to recede slowly this afternoon, indicating danger of further damage was past.

Worst in 22 Years.

The State's worst flood in 22 years has exacted a toll of at least two lives and one missing, forced hundreds of families to vacate their homes, wiped out miles of highways and railroads, destroyed scores of bridges and caused heavy damage to rich farmlands.

In Coshocton County, where the Tuscarawas and Walhonding meet, the swirling streams laid waste to crops, flooded homes and inundated bridges and highways before the water started to subside at mid-afternoon.

The two rivers dropped to 23 feet by nightfall. Their tributaries were reported falling rapidly. However, water still blocked highways and flooded 140 homes.

Red Cross and county relief offices co-operated on a rehabilitation plan for the flood victims. Relief labor will clean the flooded district before the residents may return.

Farm Damage Heavy.

Damage in Tuscarawas County alone was estimated at over $1,000,000. The rural rehabilitation office at New Philadelphia estimated crop damage and other farm losses would total $750,000. Damage to railroads was placed at approximately $100,000. Thousands of dollars damage to State and county highways resulted.

The Government Weather Bureau at Cincinnati, announced that floods along tributary streams of the Ohio River would not cause the Ohio to overflow.

The bureau predicted a crest in the Ohio of between 40 and 42 feet, probably Sunday, as against a flood stage of 52 feet.

By the Associated Press.

An unrelenting sun continued to pour sweltering heat on Middle Western States yesterday and five new deaths pushed the area's seasonal weather toll to 158.

The most acute discomfort was visited upon Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska, where temperatures generally ranged from 100 degrees to a maximum of 112 recorded at Bartlesville, Okla.

Six disaster relief workers of the National Red Cross have been sent into flooded districts in Ohio. With three relief workers already on the scene, the American Red Cross yesterday announced that three others are on their way to danger zones. Robert E. Bondy, national director of disaster relief, announced that he had ordered W. I. Jones, Asburg Cecil and Charles Carr, a member of the national staff now in Indiana, to make surveys of other districts not covered by the representatives already in the flooded section.

Manila, Aug. 8 (AP).—An avalanche crashing down upon the village of Balongan killed 50 persons and raised the toll of dead or missing to 252 in the floods which have ravaged central Luzon Island the last few days.

One hundred and eighty-nine persons were dead or missing in the vicinity of Dagupan, Province of Pangasinan, in the valley of the Aboleleg River. The river overwhelmed numerous villages, drowning inhabitants and washing bodies from cemeteries in the nearby Lingayen Gulf.

La Crosse, Wis., Aug. 8 (AP).—Leaving a wide path of destruction, a high wall of flood water from the rampaging Kickapoo River poured into the Wisconsin River at Wauzeka today.

The village of Barnim, 18 miles north of Wauzeka, was isolated, its 200 inhabitants unable to seek refuge in nearby communities as water swept through its streets and over State and county trunk highways.

$10,000 Award Goes to Widow Of Policeman

President Signs Measure for Wife of Slain Officer.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

President Roosevelt yesterday signed a bill awarding $10,000 to Mrs. Clarence J. McClary, whose husband, an Alexandria policeman, was killed by Tom Quesenbery, Loudoun County moonshiner, after a raid near Leesburg.

McClary voluntarily joined a posse which went to the aid of Federal officers after they had been fired on and one of their number wounded.

Quesenbery is now serving a long term in the Virginia Penitentiary for the murder. The bill for the relief of McClary's widow was introduced by Representative Howard W. Smith, of Alexandria.

For the first time since the organization of the Virginia State Firemen's Association, the Alexandria firemen will not participate this year in the State convention, to be held in Clifton Forge, August 13 to 16.

This action was taken at a meeting of the four fire companies, with about 150 firemen in attendance, at which addresses were made by Mayor E. C. Davison, Dr. James M. Love, Fore Chief James M. Duncan, jr., and William M. Wood. The consensus of opinion was that, while the firemen themselves do not fear contracting infantile paralysis, yet they feel that, in view of the spread of the disease in Virginia, and the warnings that have been issued by health authorities against congregating, it would not be wise to attend the meeting in a body, so long as there is any possible danger of contracting or spreading the dread disease. The action taken is understood to have been practically unanimous.

Until the meeting, the Alexandria firemen had been actively arranging for the trip to Clifton Forge. An appropriation of $2,800 for expenses of the firemen had been made, of which the city council appropriated $500, each, for the four companies, and $300 for the Citizens Band. No definite decision as to the disposition of this appropriation has been reached, according to Chief Duncan.

Frank E. Walsh, international representative of the United Garment Workers' Union, who has been in Alexandria for several days as advisor to the striking employes of the Century Manufacturing Co., shirt manufacturers, will address the strikers tonight at 8 o'clock, in Carpenters' Hall, Prince and Royal streets.

The meeting will be under the auspices of the Central Labor Union, and an invitation to attend has been extended to the city council, pastors of the various Alexandria churches and all citizens interested.

Unsuccessful attempts to cash checks were made yesterday by an unidentified man, apparently about 50 years old, at the stores of M. J. McFarland, 1301 Prince Street, and Woodie's Market, 1227 King street. According to the police, the man, when refused cash for his checks, ordered groceries to be sent to an address on Duke street, extended, asking that he be paid the difference in cash. According to Detective Sergt. Edgar Sims, the person living at the address given had not ordered groceries and was unable to explain the matter. No groceries were sent, and the man was not apprehended.

Members of the Alexandria Holy Name Society will attend communion in a body at the 7 o'clock mass in St. Mary's Catholic Church Sunday morning. The organization will submit its attendance report to the State convention next month, and all members have been urged to attend this meeting.

1,600 Chickens Lost In $5,000 Farm Fire

A blaze at the chicken farm of Russell Burdette near Woodfield, Md., yesterday destroyed a large henhouse with 1,600 chickens. Total damage was estimated at $5,000. The building contained brooders and incubators in addition to the fowls.

Volunteer firemen from Rockville and Gaithersburg were too late to fight the fire. Cause of the flames could not be determined.

Loan and grant totaling $794,000 to Montgomery County for schools was announced yesterday by Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes.

The loan and grant, made through the board of education and the Montgomery County commissioners, will be a 30 per cent grant an dthe balance a loan at 4 per cent interest for labor and material.

The money will be used for construction of several school buildings and for remodeling and alterations to other buildings.

A delegation of approximately 35 persons prominent in the political and civic life of Montgomery County urged the extension of Sixteenth street from the East-West highway to Georgia avenue at a hearing before the State roads commission, in Baltimore, yesterday.

A. H. Gardner, of Woodside, acting chairman of the joint committee of civic associations in the Woodside-Forest Glen area, made the principal address, presenting a brief with maps and data and a petition signed by 600 residents of the immediate community.

Others who spoke in favor of the project were Walter W. Dawson, of Rockville, counsel for the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission; County Commissioner Paul Coughlan,; Richard M. Ham, director of safety of the District of Columbia Motor Club, and Charles W. Hopkins, chairman of the committee on roads, streets and bridges for the Montgomery County Civic Federation.

Members of the delegation stated that the commission promised consideration of the project and said they may come to Silver Spring shortly to look over the site.

Virginia M. Coolidge today filed suit for a limited divorce from Edmund B. Coolidge, jr., charging desertion. The bill states that the couple was married on March 26, 1932, and that she was abandoned on July 15, 1935.

According to the petition the couple have one child, Martha Elizabeth, 2 years old, who is in the custody of the plaintiff. Mrs. Coolidge, through her attorney, Robert B. Peter, jr., asks alimony and the custody of the child.

Fund Approved For Frederick Sewerage Lines

Mayor Receives Word of U. S. Decision on $452,295 Grant.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., August 8.—Mayor Lloyd C. Culler announced at a meeting of the Board of Aldermen last night that he received word from Senator George I. Radcliffe that the Federal Government had approved a grant of $452,295 toward the construction of a sewerage system here. The Government's grant is 45 per cent of the estimated cost.

After a discussion on the proposed improvement which has been under consideration for more than 10 years, it was decided to call a public meeting at which the Government decision will be submitted and action will be requested on a proposal to call a special election and submit the question of making the improvement to the voters.

Mayor Culler said the public meeting probably will be called within 10 days or two weeks. It is expected that expert engineers will place the plan before the meeting and full expression on the sewerage question will be requested.

The opinion long has prevailed among city officials that the time is fast approaching when the city will be called upon by the State Board of Health to install a modern sewerage system. No legislative action will be necessary to provide means for the city to finance its part of the cost. Sanction by voters puts the financing up to the Mayor and Aldermen and the usual method of issuing bonds for supplying funds for municipal improvement would be adopted.

Armed Men Guard 60 Prisoners At Great Falls Prison Road Camp

Virginia Felons Transferred to Old Georgetown Pike From Near Leesburg; Escape Danger Minimized by Superintendent.

Armed guards paced up and down yesterday as a new convict camp was occupied by 60 prisoners on the old Georgetown pike near Great Falls in Virginia. F. L. Riordan, of the Virginia highway department, camp superintendent, said the convicts would be used to repair and build roads within a radius of 10 miles.

The 5-acre plot on which the camp was located is privately owned. The State was said to hold on option to rent the land for three years if desired.

A cellhouse, office, garage and storeroom already have been constructed on the site. A mess hall will be built shortly.

Riordan said the convicts would begin building a new link, 2½ miles long, to connect the old Georgetown pike with State route No. 7. The task will require 6 or 8 weeks.

The convicts, all serving terms of 1 to 20 years, were transferred to the new camp from a location 3 miles south of Leesburg. Five prisoners were said to have escaped during the three years the camp existed there. Three were recaptured.

Danger of new escapes was minimized by Riordan. "There is no chance of any trouble," he said. "These men are under control. They are guarded all the time and are chained to the wall at night. "If a guard lets one of them get away he loses his job."

Riordan added 33 convict camps were scattered over Virginia and that most of the State's roads were built with such labor.

Reflections On Rhode Island.

Even though President Roosevelt did not know in advance that a congressional election was being held in Rhode Island, as he said at his press conference on the morning after, he will do well to brood on its implications in retrospect. For of all the danger signals which have of late been perceptible along the track of the New Deal, this is the clearest and should be the most sobering to the man at the wheel.

A turnover of 34,400 votes since last November in a typical American community—partly industrial, but partly agricultural, heretofore consistently Democratic and with the major issue clearly a vote of confidence in the Administration—is not to be laughed off or lightly explained away. Coming at the opening of the presidential campaign of 1936 it will inevitably provide that stimulus of self-confidence and hope which the Republican opposition greatly needs. By the same token it affords the present leaders of the party in power food for very serious thought.

That thought, if it is to have constructive results, will take the form of a most careful assessment of the state of the Nation—physical and psychological—at the close of the twenty-ninth month of the New Deal. It will ask where the many exaggerated promises have failed of fulfillment; it will inquire why initial enthusiasm has in so many instances given way to skepticism or honest anxiety. And it will reflect upon the relationship between gains achieved and the costs of making them—not merely in mounting deficits but even more in creating an attitude which assumes that the Federal Government owes every man a livelihood, regardless of his services to the community, and regardless of the ability of the national income to stand the strain.

For this by-election in Rhode Island proves conclusively that the honeymoon is over. It is no longer possible to make glowing comparisons between the great expectations of this Administration and the attested deficiencies of its predecessor. After two and one-half years of the New Deal, results less dubious than strikes by relief workers are in order. How much has unemployment been curtailed? How has the cost of living altered? What is the future for individual savings? How are current governmental expenditures to be paid for? This is the type of simple, yet searching, question to which satisfactory answer must be given if the experience in Rhode Island is not to be repeated on a very much larger scale.

The kind of victory which the New Deal seeks, said President Roosevelt in the foreword to his book entitled "On Our Way," is exemplified by the Greek saying that "Creation is the victory of persuasion and not of force." Lots of eloquent persuasion to give the impression of creation has been tried on the country since March 4, 1933. But, as Rhode Island evidently thinks, persuasion without tangible creative achievement as a basis wears pretty thin.

The Copyright Bill.

The Senate, after thorough discussion on the floor, has adopted the Duffy copyright bill. This is desirable legislation for which our authors and their public have waited much too long. It does credit to Senator Duffy, who steered the measure to victory; to Senator McAdoo, who guided it to favorable committee action, and to the entire Senate, which passed it without the formality of a record vote.

The bill has, as its primary purpose, the protection in other countries of American creators of literary and artistic works. It paves the way to the adherence of the United States to the general copyright convention, under which most of the countries of the world reciprocally pledge copyright without formality, that is, copyright existing from the mere fact of having created a work of literature or art.

The bill clarifies and establishes the right of authors to divide the utilization of their works by separate licenses for such purposes as serial presentation, dramatization, publication in book form, and conversion into motion picture scenarios, in each case for limited periods of time, and within fixed territorial areas. It extends copyright to all kinds of manuscripts and provides for a single copyright term of 56 years. In numerous other ways it strengthens the position of the creator of works subject to copyright.

It likewise draws upon the quarter century of experience under the existing law to make improvements calculated to benefit the industrial user of copyrighted works and the consuming public. For instance, while enlarging the field of obtainable damages for infringement of copyright, it repeals the minimum fine of $250 which the courts are now required to award regardless of the damage suffered. In place of this, the courts are directed to make the minimum award sufficient to stop infringement, and to be just and adequate in view of the circumstances of the case. The aim here is to prevent exploitation of the small commercial consumer in case of inadvertent infringement.

Important as are such alterations in the law, the essential characteristic of the combined bill and treaty is ethical rather than economic. Shall piracy of copyrighted works be terminated? Shall there be the same international standards of right and wrong in this field as are established within each country? In answering these questions in the affirmative, the measures before Congress makes its strongest bid for support.

It would be most unfortunate if the House of Representatives should now fail to do its part in this overdue improvement.

The Tax On Enterprise.

When the new tax program was first announced, it was promptly shown to be a sham as a revenue producer and a joke as a wealth-sharing device. As a means of breaking up large fortunes, and discouraging accumulation of wealth, however, the proposed inheritance taxes, combined with existing estate taxes, would be devastatingly efficacious. Realizing that fact, analysts of the tax bill have been devoting an increasing amount of attention to the economic consequences of confiscatory levies of this sort.

Their concern is not for the individual legatee who may be forced to part with a large proportion of his inheritance, but for thousands of workers for whom opportunities to earn a living have heretofore been provided through the productive employment of saved wealth. As F. H. Clausen, a witness before the Senate Finance Committee, said, "Every individual who has built up a sizable income must inevitably in the process pay wages and salaries to a large number of others, either directly or indirectly. * * * Discouraging the full utilization of the ability of men of this character means less employment for wage earners and salaried employes."

Confiscatory taxes upon existing wealth productively employed does not, of course, necessarily result in an immediate physical break-up of a going concern. But high inheritance and estate taxes do compel the sale of capital assets, with consequent changes in ownership, shifts in management and generally dislocating effects.

Thus the difficulties that would arise in trying to finance the payment of the proposed inheritance taxes upon a family concern such as the Ford company have been frequently cited. Robert H. Jackson, counsel for the Bureau of Internal Revenue, says that the tax could be paid either through a bond or stock issue, which would convert a family industry into a widely owned one. It can not be assumed, however, that such assets could be readily disposed of at all times. Certainly it would be impossible to sell extensive holdings in many industrial corporations without substantial sacrifice of existing equities. Furthermore, a forced shift of ownership to outsiders is not a contingency which promises more efficient management.

The disruptive effects of excessively high estate and inheritance taxes upon going concerns constitute only part of the indictment against them. Even more serious from the national viewpoint is the resultant destruction of that spirit of enterprise which leads men to risk their capital in new undertakings. The United States has been developed by individualists of a pioneering type, who have seen and seized upon chances to make a profit. New industries have not grown, nor will they spring, from fortunes invested in gilt-edged bonds or tax-exempt Government securities. Employment openings have not been created by timorous, ultra-conservative investors who think always of safety first.

Estate and inheritance taxes undoubtedly should be high enough to prevent antisocial accumulation, and income taxes should be graduated in accordance with ability to pay. The bounds are overstepped, however, whenever taxes are raised to a point at which incomes that would ordinarily be saved for productive use are spent on consumption goods or forced into tax-exasion channels. If the capitalistic system is to endure, the rewards which it offers can not be taxed out of existence. If they are, the Government must be prepared to take over the ownership and management of industry and should say unequivocally that this is its policy and intention.

30-Day Leaves.

There will be great rejoicing in Washington at the news that the House has passed the bill giving Government employes 30 days for annual leave and another establishing the standard for sick leave at 15 days. It will be justified.

With the Senate already promising quick action on the two measures, the Government seems at last to be admitting the questionable logic of pinching those who are in part employed to scatter Federal funds in generous fistfuls the country over. The Ramspeck bill, of course, does not double the vacations of Federal employes but simply restores the rate at which leave accumulated before the depression. Moreover, since the sick-leave bill reduces the regular sick leave from its former 30 to 15 days, the total leave of absence with pay allowable during a year is not increased.

The measures will tend to reduce cheating and other irregularities which are reported to have increased since the Economy Act first reduced the free time of Government workers. In addition, employes whose homes are in distant sections of the country—and there are many of them—will now be able to return home at least once a year, where the 15-day leave would not have permitted it. This is only reasonable.

Some way should now be devised to insure symmetrical administration of the new laws. Too much variety of official attitudes—ranging from the most exacting insistence on promptness to the most liberal hour-and-a-half lunching—now prevails among the several departments.

In Great Britain—And Here.

During July the number of persons registered as unemployed in Great Britain fell below the two million mark for the first time in five years. The total as of July 22, according to Ministry of Labor statistics, was 1,972,941. And these figures may be taken as an accurate measure of all the able-bodied unemployed in that country. For there is no dole for the British worker who is not registered for available employment in the nation-wide public employment exchange system.

While this showing is highly favorable, and of great political advantage to the Conservative Government, well-informed British observers are far from optimistic regarding the prospect of continued improvement, in spite of the relatively flourishing state of trade and industry. The reason for their anxiety is revealed by an inspection of the unemployed figures, classified by industries. Coal mining alone accounts for 300,000 idle men. Building and construction have approximately 240,000 unemployed; engineering, shipbuilding and ship repairing, another 150,000. From the cotton textile industry nearly 100,000 are registered as out of work.

Not only is unemployment concentrated in these industries, which, excepting construction, have suffered severely from the loss of foreign markets, but it is also localized in so-called "depressed areas." As a result Great Britain is a country of profound contrasts today, with certain districts prosperous and improving, while others remain sunk in the misery that comes from a conviction that recovery seems all but impossible. According to reports, the condition of these desolate regions is made especially cheerless because of the desire of still flourishing concerns to move to other parts of the country.

This, of course, is a situation that urgently calls for government intervention and the British are now discussing plans for a rehabilitation of the distressed areas and further efforts to transfer surplus workers to other regions. The London Economist, while maintaining that a considerable expansion of the export trade is possible, admits that the most optimistic forecasts of the probable results of a vigorous new initiative in commercial policy would not provide for the reabsorption into employment of more than a portion of the unemployed in the special areas. Consequently, the only alternative, except the dole, for a large body of employable workers must be found either in specially provided work within the depressed areas or through a transfer of labor, exceedingly difficult to accomplish on any adequate scale.

Mr. Lloyd George's plan for a public works program to be financed by a "prosperity" loan has been flatly rejected by the government, but apparently sentiment in official circles is less hostile than formerly to outlays on plans of demonstrable soundness which are also socially desirable. The commissioner appointed to make a study of the "depressed areas" in England and Wales affirms that the unemployment problem there requires special governmental action and that "there is hardly a government department which can not and should not help."

The British procedure in this field provides an interesting contrast to our own. Efforts to encourage the revival of private industry have been highly successful in reducing unemployment, but still leave a residue for which special measures must be taken by the government. In this limited field the state plans to supplement the efforts of industry in careful and well-integrated public undertakings. It will start this work with exact knowledge of the extent and character of the unemployment to be eliminated, and with a perfected employment exchange system for making placements efficiently and with a minimum of disturbance to private industry. The whole operation will be carried out on a balanced budget, without boondoggling, work relief, work relief strikes or ballyhoo to look tragically silly in retrospect.

Scientists in California are freezing monkeys and then resuscitating them. Not a bad idea, if it could be worked out for the benefit of those who have to spend their summers in Washington.

Greenwich Villagers have just published their first "blue book." Oddly enough, most of the persons included in it admit they're "in the red."

Good-bye, Economy Act.

From The Philadelphia Inquirer.

The bill restoring benefits to veterans of the Spanish-American War, Boxer Rebellion and Philippine insurrection would, if signed by the President, return 50,000 to the rolls, at an additional cost the first year of $45,581,132, and consign to the wastebasket the last of the economies effected by the act of 1933.

The veterans have done no more in pushing their claims than other groups and classes with a cause, having discovered that this is a Government of expediency rather than principle; that the wheel that does the squeaking gets the grease and that if you make enough noise you will be heard. If everybody else gets what he wants by shouting for it, why not the veterans, who at least have records of patriotic service to support their claims?

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

"Our Brothers' Keepers."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Representative Dickstein deserves unbounded praise for his utterances in regard to Hitler. It is the only attitude for either a Christian or civilized man or Nation to take. Germany's ruler is neither Christian (this he proclaims) nor civilized, which he probably would not admit, but his actions prove, unless he really is insane, and this I have believed for some time.

It may not "be our business" to inquire into or criticize the acts of subjects, but as rulers, I think we are "our brothers' keepers" and should show our abhorrence of wicked tyranny by absolutely boycotting such a nation, until its ruler is made to realize that civilized nations consider them barbarians and unfit to recognize other than heathens who need Christianizing.

This is the only way to deliver the poor helpless souls from under the heels of a barbaric ruler. Everyone knows he does not represent the true German people, but they are helpless as long as Christian nations consider Hitler fit to be recognized as one of them. M. M. S.

Laureates' Indorsement.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Poet Laureate League has 300 members, and at the last Writers Rendezvous meeting we indorsed Earl Cuevas' plan for relief for poets. Edwin Markham has recently done the same.

The Poet Laureate League is not "a one-man affair." I have been a member of its rank and file for years. More power to Cuevas' pen.

On Alien Musicians.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In today's Post you have a short item about Representative Hoeppel's bill restricting the admission of alien musicians to this country.

You will note that the bill does not prohibit the entry of alien musicians to this country. It merely lays down the principle of reciprocity for those countries which can far better afford to give employment to an American musician than can America to the foreigners.

Germany, for instance, has about 50 opera houses. What the bill really says is this: "If it is proper for America to give a job to a German singer, at a time when we have only two or three opera houses, how much easier is it for Germany to give a job to an American singer?" The same is true of many other countries which are practically barring American singers and at the same time sending their own to this country to get away with big fees.

Were all foreign artists of high artistic merit it would not have been so bad. But in recent years there has not come a single foreign singer who could not have been improved upon with one of our own. Instead of making stars out of foreign singers who, very often, are unknown quantities in their own country, why not raise to stardom our own? J. A. MARCUS.

For Shifting The Olympics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some concrete expression of disapproval against the persecutions and outrages being perpetrated in Germany today should be made. Since that nation is glorifying the flesh over the spirit there would be no greater reprimand from the nations of the world than to move the Olympic games from Germany to some other country.

There is a very fine article on this subject in a recent issue of the Christian Century. May I quote a paragraph as follows:

> The Olympic games should be moved from Berlin not only to impress the Germans but to preserve the nature of the games. The games are supposed to promote international friendship by an exhibition of sportsmanship and fair play. Fair play in Germany! Can anyone who reads the press dispatches take stock in that? Where do the athletes come from? From the various youth organizations and sports clubs. But the Nazis are now wiping out Catholic and Protestant, as well as Jewish bodies of this kind. If these organizations are dissolved, or are refused permission to use the sports grounds, what chance have they for training athletes? Moreover, with Nazi race and state philosophy declaring all non-Aryans and church youth organizations enemies of Germany, what chance is there for fair play in competition for the Catholic, Protestant and Jewish youth?

America has always been "the land of the free" and the country that has championed fair play. She should take the initiative in moving the Olympic games to a fairer and pleasanter setting.

THE BLEACHERS.

Our Credits Outstanding.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On the subject of the foreign debts owed us by Great Britain and continental countries, are we going to behave as if nothing had happened?

While we are fighting among ourselves as to means of obtaining Government funds, are we going to buy steel and other merchandise, coddle and treat nations who, like Great Britain, have made "a scrap of paper" of their obligations to us as if they were acting honorably with us?

If the case were reversed, and we attempted to avoid payments on our financial debts to, say, the English, we would be treated like a disgraced people, and shamed into the making of at least interest payments.

If we are going to so amiably forget what we should at least in part collect (without expressing our dissatisfaction through embargoes or otherwise), we are surrendering ourselves to the necessity of just so much heavier demand in taxation. No other nation would accept this situation lying down. It is a poor policy to treat a defaulting nation as if it had honorably done its part. We can not afford it now and can not afford it for the future. Our press and Congress should be more active in expressing disapproval. Our public should realize what has been done to it abroad, and should shape its sentiments and actions accordingly. It is poor national and fiscal policy to go to sleep on this subject.

"What Does It All Mean?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: From reading in a mimeographed publication called the "Fighting Transient" being printed by transients on relief, it struck me that we must soon be forced to recognize a new class type—the Professional Relief Man.

If the paper represents the sentiment of the majority of the relief-work seekers, these men feel that they are neither working on charity nor are they in the same class as the ordinary laborer who finds his work where he can. They feel that since they have once "gotten on relief," they have formed a valid contract with the Federal Government; a contract that places them in a position to demand as of right what we might suppose they would rather accept as a favor, and that the Government is now "hedging" on the contract. They demand, through this paper, that the Government take the responsibility of providing work—no cheap-labor jobs, but high-pay jobs—for them, and quote no less a backer than the Declaration of Independence as authority.

An editorial ("We See Strikes of Relief Workers"), which appeared in this paper, says: "As surely as winter follows summer, just as surely do we see uprising and rebellion at these slave rates paid. Relief workers are going to strike. Just by listening to the talk of the men you know that all will not be quiet along the Potomac this winter. There have been sporadic relief strikes throughout the Nation before. But this time public sentiment, sentiment of other workers, is behind the man on relief. Even the 'millionaires club' of the United States Senate voted to pay the prevailing wage on public works. They backed down, however, when Wall street snapped the whip and made them dance."

The main complaint, as far as I could see, was the wage scale. The men, according to this paper, are paid $11.25 a week for labor. They point out that no man in Washington can live in decent manner on these wages, nor can he save a cent of this money, all of which is probably quite true. But the underlying idea is the somewhat amazing assumption that the Federal Government is obliged to provide work for them. This is a new idea, I believe. They feel that after they have been provided with work, they still have a right to make the wage agreement. It is as new an idea today as the theories of the Rights of Man were in the eighteenth century.

What does it all mean? Are we to see a new social renaissance, with new trends of thought as to what constitutes our right of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness? If this new idea grows, it may prove to be the means of the founding of an entirely new system of government, and under such a government a society would be founded in which each man will be born with the right to demand from his government work which will provide him with the necessities of living, as well as enough extra to allow him normal entertainment. Will historians of the coming century point out this year as the one in which the new Idea was first set forth, just as they now tell the story of the changes wrought by the Napoleonic era?

Where Sherlock Goes to School

Post Office, Friday.

UNDER all the well-deserved applause for J. Edgar Hoover's Division of Investigation in the Department of Justice one hears a single dissenting note. It is low—in more senses than one. It is, moreover hypercritical, but it is persistent.

It is academic. It issues from certain scholastic lips. Certain minds, though glad enough to have Mr. Hoover's clever pupils grab the gunmen and can the kidnapers, complain because his other admirers call his practical courses of instruction an Anti-Crime College!

Phrases create realities. "If this sort of loose thinking continues," say the critics, "the first thing we know our most respectable university faculties will be assailed by a demand for 'anti-crime' courses."

Fellow professors, that demand has already been made of "respectable" European universities—at one of the most respectable it has been supplied.

* * *

The City of Lausanne, professors, is in Switzerland.

In the City of Lausanne, oddly enough, is the University of Lausanne.

And in the University of Lausanne is a school for detectives.

Now, you can't candidly call the University of Lausanne—housed in the ancient Palais de Rumine, 500 feet about Lake Leman—anything except a bona-fide university. True, it became one as late as 1890. But as a college it dates from 1537. Today it contains all the faculties unto a university properly appertaining: divinity, arts-and-letters, medicine, law and whatnot. Its roll of instructors has borne such names as those of Monnard, de Crouaz—Theodore Beza, of course—Conrad Gesner and Alexandre Vinet.

And to those has for several years been added:

"A. Bischoff, dean of the School of Criminology."

To every appearance a mere scholar, this Dr. Bischoff: quiet, abstracted, hesitant—out of his classrooms and office. Yet, in the confines of an old institution, he has built a college that, for the criminal, is terrifyingly up-to-date. All the continent of Europe and, we understand, the Scotland Yard of insular England, sends sleuths there. Of some of these Dr. Bischoff has made super-sleuths in practice; in theory, he has defintiely demonstrated that Philo Vance is a caricature, Bertillon old-fashioned.

The college is run like many another, but because it applies familiar methods to an unusual subject, it provides surprises. Introduction of the "case system" at Harvard's law school—court trials conducted by students and instructors—once revolutionized the study of the law. Lausanne's detective school also has a case system.

But it has other systems. It has lectures on current crime, on criminal psychology, on murder (what price De Quincy now?), on poisons and police surgery, all types of robbery, counterfeiting and the recognition of false jewels, on the relation of insanity to felony.

Dr. Bischoff and his assistants have invented almost as many police instruments as police theories. With every new advance in the science of crime-detection, the science of the criminal has to move one point forward—or come to an end. It moves; the school must catch up. Therefore, the Lausanne School's laboratory and field work are forever progressing. The research department carries on a constant study of reports from every corner of the earth: as soon as crooks started finger-skin mutilation to nullify identification by finger prints, Bischoff and his coworkers sought some substitute—and found the ear nearly as changeless as the digit-tip.

Dear fellow American professors, haven't we room for an "anti-crime" course or two at even our most "respectable" universities? . . .

And now, not only to fill the column, but as a step toward filling a want longer felt than that for detective-colleges, we gladly publish a letter from our constructive critic, S. J. R.

The other day, one of our correspondents pleaded for "a singular pronoun which includes both the masculine and feminine gender." We had lightly written:

"Lives there a man (or woman) with soul so dead as never to himself (or herself) hath said," etc., etc.

"I," writes S. J. R., "suggest that this might read:

"Either 'Lives there a man (or woman) with soul so dead and never to self hath said'—

"Or 'Lives there a man (or woman) with soul so dead as never to himorher hath said.'

"Writers," adds S. J. R., "take such liberties in the use of words that I do not think the above phrases would be considered too far-fetched."

Well, they wouldn't be pretty—but if you don't believe us, look out for some phrases that we occasionally discover very much nearer home. If you don't believe us, look out for the next Whipping-Post.

Political Enmities Melt Swiftly.

New York, Aug. 8.

AMID the turmoil of the time, with many leaders howling denunciations down the wind, it would be a helpful thing if the citizens could relax and remember what happened to some of the furious enmities of the past.

I have in mind a bitter campaign which was waged against Herbert Hoover in Kansas City during the Republican convention of 1928. There were quite a large body of Republican patriots in Kansas City who thought Mr. Hoover a most disastrous man and banded themselves together in a coalition known as The Allies in an effort to avert the dreadful calamity of his nomination. They uttered remarks of the "most unkindest" character about Mr. Hoover, calling him everything from a foreigner to a Democrat in human form, which was worse to their way of thinking. And by way of a graphic appeal to that which they fulsomely referred to as the intelligence of the voters, they caused a Kalamazoo shut hack to be drawn through the streets to indicate the type of vehicle which the country was sure to go to hell in should he be elected. But Mr. Hoover had put in several years in the Cabinet, and, being by no means dumb, had been accumulating a large collection of postmasters, prohibition agents, marshals, judges, receivers, and all such parasites against this occasion. Moreover, he had been, up to then, the greatest master of personal publicity, with the exception of Henry Ford, that newsprint, noise and the infallible gullibility of the clear-eyed, straight-thinking, square-shooting average American had ever produced.

• • • •

HIS nomination, therefore, was such a push-over that the convention management had a hard time stretching the debauch long enough to permit the bootleggers and hotelkeepers to get in their licks. And when the push-over had been pushed over, lo and behold, it developed that The Allies had been only fooling all the time. They now turned to and fought with all the ardor of their patriotic souls to elect that man of the hour, that giant sum of human knowledge and virtue, the barefoot boy from Iowa, Herbert Hoover. (Prolonged cheers.)

I recall also a spell of sulking and thumb-sucking on the part of Alfred E. Smith, now retired, like John D. Rockefeller, jr., to comparative quiet and dram-selling high above the street level in New York. Mr. Smith, having been fouled in his first contest for the Presidency, thought he deserved a return match in 1932, and, when F. D. Roosevelt was selected for the logical contendership instead, was bitterly disappointed. In his case, it was not so much anything that he said against Mr. Roosevelt that expressed his detestation, as his failure to campaign for him. But at last, when it had become thoroughly understood that Mr. Smith regarded Mr. Roosevelt as nothing but a Democratic Hoover, all of a sudden Mr. Smith showed up at Mr. Roosevelt's meeting in Madison Square Garden, shook his hand and called him an old potato.

That is, he was reported to have called him an old potato and let it ride. The fact was that in the turmoil of the meeting the journalists could not hear what he said and Mr. Fred Storm, who knew them both, just guessed that Al Smith said, "Hello, you Old Potato."

• • • •

THIS term of endearment, going unchallenged by Mr. Smith, was accepted as a whole-hearted indorsement of Mr. Roosevelt and again a great block of citizens who were riding a spirited hate found their charger shot from under them by their own general. The heathen Chinese, however, has no monopoly on the practice of joining an enemy that he can't lick, so the Smith people of 1932, like the Kansas City Allies of 1928, turned their coats inside out and began to shell the very positions which they had been defending the night before.

Again, there was Tomboy Huey Long, who told his fellow-citizens in 1932 that Mr. Roosevelt was to say the least, a combination Washington, Jefferson and Jackson. But later, getting into a local New Orleans fight over the distribution of the royalties on gambling and prostitution, he turned on himself so fast that for a moment he seemed to be standing hindside before. The Tomboy can turn again, what's more, so it seems very foolish for any of his true-believers to run a temperature.

But it does no good to tell people that. They can't help it and the boss patriots, knowing their weakness, are constantly steaming them up to turn the rascals out only to be discovered next day calling the rascals old potato or old vegetable dinner.

We had in the prize fight business one time a pair of boys who used to sleep in one berth on a tour of grudge fights, and Mr. Clarence Darrow carried on a brother act with the Rev. Clarence True Wilson, of the Anti-Saloon League, riding from town to town in the same compartment and collaborating on names to call one another from the platform.

On Growing Old

By

William Lyon Phelps

THE art of growing old is really an art; just as two persons living together is an art; just as teaching in school is an art; just as playing the piano is an art. Other things being fairly equal, one may grow old successfully or one may grow old unsuccessfully. The art of growing old is not necessarily connected with success in other things. It is possible for one to succeed in business and fail in life and I have known those who have failed in business and succeeded in life.

• • • •

The famous French writer, whose books are read so widely today, Andre Maurois, says there are two ways of growing old and doing it very well indeed.

According to this Frenchman, the first way is not to grow old at all. He does not mean to die in youth, and thus dodge the problem, no, he means there are certain persons who really do not grow old.

And he remarks that these wonderful octogenarians, whose minds are alert and keen, and who are fairly active physically, and give no sign in company that they are decrepit or that any allowances must be made for them, are not persons who have tried to preserve their vigor. They are rather persons whose whole working life has been so crowded with things that had to be done, whose minds have been so steadily occupied, that they have never had time to consider the question of age at all. There was always work that had to be done immediately, and they did it at 75 even as they had done it at 35. He names Clemenceau, and also Gladstone, as good illustrations.

Behind The Italian Campaign

If Mussolini Defies League, World Slips Back To Pre-War Status.

By Livingston Hartley.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE League of Nations Council has held its emergency session to deal with the Italian threat to Ethiopia. The practical result of its meeting is the postponement of any decision on the basic dispute until September 4.

By providing for further attempts to arbitrate the Ualual incident and by allowing Great Britain and France another month to work diplomatically for a peaceful outcome, the council has avoided any immediate crisis between Italy and the League. Two months of such efforts, however, have already proved fruitless, and a far more explosive crisis looms ahead in September, when the end of the Ethiopian rains would permit the armies of Mussolini to undertake offensive operations.

When, or before, this crisis is reached, two issues must be settled, that between Italy and Ethiopia and that between Italy and the League. Failure of the League to restrain Mussolini would represent the greatest disaster since the World War, because an Italian attack upon Ethiopia, in patent violation of the League of Nations covenant and the Kellogg pact, would signify the breakdown of the entire system of collective security.

• • • •

FOR Americans, for British, for French and for other peoples who have paid the awful price of participation in the World War, this is much more than a dispute between Italy and Ethiopia; it is a decisive clash between one national dictator and an intelligent system of peace preservation through collective action which the world has slowly created in 16 years of arduous effort.

If collective security should fail completely on this occasion, the international antiwar machinery will become discredited and devoid of future practical value. America and the other civilized nations, will be back to 1914, and all further efforts to prevent a new world war will depend once more on the nineteenth century machinery of national alliances which failed so dismally after Serajevo. The terrible cost in life and prosperity which has darkened our world since 1914 will have been proved by events to have taught us nothing.

One question must be considered if we are to realize clearly the price involved in allowing Mussolini to override the peace machinery which centers at Geneva. Since the Japanese occupation of Manchuria merely weakened and did not destroy the League of Nations and the Kellogg pact, why should an Italian invasion of Ethiopia threaten the very existence of collective security?

• • • •

THE answer lies in history, in geography, and in practical politics. The Covenant of the League of Nations is the core of collective security, since besides a treaty in which its members undertake, in Article 10, "to respect and preserve against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence" of each other, it contains a permanently functioning organization and definite obligations binding the membership to carry out the above guarantee.

The League, however, was primarily designed to avert another war in Europe. It has since 1920, on the many occasions when its machinery has been brought into play, successfully prevented action contrary to Article 10 by any European nation. The Manchurian dispute war far from Europe, a conflict in which the United States and Russia were both more intimately interested than any member of the League except perhaps Great Britain. Furthermore, as a matter of practical politics, the Japanese navy was supreme in Far Eastern waters, and its supremacy could not be successfully challenged.

There was, therefore, an excellent excuse for the League's failure in Manchuria, the excuse that the employment of effective League sanctions against Japan was a practical impossibility.

The position of Italy is completely different, because Italy is a European state, exceedingly vulnerable to European pressure through the League. Forcible dissuasion of the Italian government from aggressive action in Ethiopia would be a comparatively easy task, demanding no more than collective good faith and the courage of conviction on the part of the European members of the League, supplemented by co-operative support for general League objectives exhibited independently by the Government of the United States.

• • • •

FOR example, Italy, since she is deficient in raw materials and in a somewhat precarious economic and financial condition, is peculiarly susceptible to economic blockade, and similarly vulnerable, due to her geographical shape and extensive coastline, to concerted naval pressure. Furthermore, Italy can carry out a large-scale invasion of Ethiopia only by using the Suez Canal.

Although the Convention of Constantinople of October 29, 1888, expressly provides that the Suez Canal shall "always be free and open, in time of war as in time of peace, to every vessel of commerce or of war, without distinction of flag," it seems obvious that Great Britain, acting under the authorization of the council of the League, could legally close the canal to Italian troops and military supplies. A nation which flagrantly breaks its own treaty obligations could make little case against a similar disregard of a treaty stipulation carried out as a sanction by the council of the League of Nations.

Since the League could so easily force Italy to abandon her aggressive intentions toward Ethiopia, any failure of the League to achieve this end could properly be attributed to the bad faith of its membership. After such undebatable proof of the worthlessness of national pledges, the value of the guarantees contained in the League Covenant would decline toward zero. The League would be rendered ineffective as a future guarantor of peace, for if the League could not stop Italy, what powerful aggressor nation could the League ever hope to stop?

Mussolini's successful disregard of the League of Nations in the Ethiopian dispute would amount to the triumph of might over right, and would bring as its result the future submergence of law in foreign relations. Its disruptive effect upon international society would be the greater because it would represent so patently a cold-blooded aggression prepared months in advance, and not a sudden explosion caused by a frontier clash.

• • • •

IF Mussolini works his will on the Ethiopians, he will destroy collective security. For if the League of Nations should fail so completely, no value would be left to the Kellogg Pact or the countless other arbitration, conciliation and non-aggression treaties that have been created since the war. Force would become not only paramount, but the sole arbiter in international relations.

Conditions would be actually worse than in 1914, because the value of a national promise, which was considerable at the time of Serajevo, would have been demolished by practice and precedent. As Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign secretary, informed the House of Commons on July 11, "If the system of collective security is smashed and if the League becomes so feeble and so futile as to lose any real influence, in the course of events the old system of alliances must necessarily reappear with all its ancient disquiets and intrigues."

Alliances themselves, however, would become of doubtful value if the failure of the members of the League to restrain Mussolini from aggression had proved that the pledges of nations could no longer be given reliance. One basis of national security alone would remain, competition in armaments.

Under such conditions, another great European war would seem to be unavoidable. In the absence of collective security, civilization would have no means to avert such a war except an effort to build on the shifting sands of international distrust a new balance of power in Europe, and old world political mechanism which has always ended in mobilization.

• • • •

THE future of the British Empire would then be clouded, since its far-flung territories are peculiarly vulnerable to war and dependent on world stability. France and her allies would also be seriously affected; they would be far less safe from German aggression if their mutual military pledges could no longer be fully trusted.

We Americans could not fail to be intimately concerned, in spite of the Atlantic Ocean, since it is very far from certain that we could succeed in remaining neutral during another great war in Europe. Our relations with Japan also, during the retrogression toward force that the destruction of collective security must imply, would inevitably become more ominous.

The loss to civilization can be visualized more clearly if we take a broad view. In 1914 the international anarchy of unrestricted nationalism led the world to war. Since 1920, as a direct result of wartime suffering, we have restricted the field of nationalism by positive and negative national pledges and international machinery to fulfill these pledges. We have passed the first milestones along a road which humanity must eventually travel, since our civilization can not indefinitely survive in a world where the international integration of economics and science is entirely divorced from political progress.

The abandonment of this road now would expose us all to the law of the jungle in international relations. It would require our children or our grandchildren painfully to achieve once more the progress now within our grasp.

Hopkins-Ickes Quarrel Forced Mackall to Quit

I was responsible for that earthquake in Asia, too."

"I have had nothing to do with it," he continued. "No program ever was submitted here. I didn't block any program. Neither Mackall nor anyone else submitted an application for PWA funds.

"Senator Radcliffe took up the matter several days ago. Senator Tydings brought it up last Monday. I asked him why they didn't submit an application. The matter came up at the White House Wednesday and we all agreed to it."

The White House conference Wednesday was attended by Ickes, Hopkins, Tydings and Radcliffe. Several hours later acceptance of Mackall's resignation was announced by Hopkins' office. It is understood that general agreement to the program, which was that originally proposed by Mackall, had been predicated on acceptance of the Mackall resignation.

Referring to a statement quoting Mackall as saying that Ickes had blocked his plans, the PWA administrator said:

"I had thought that Mackall was a responsible person, but I have concluded that he is highly irresponsible."

Ickes said that Mayor Jackson had discussed the program with Wolman and that Wolman had suggested that a formal application be submitted.

"Mr. Mackall was very carefully cultivating the opinion in Maryland that he was to run the hole show and PWA was to be disregarded," Ickes said.

"As a matter of fact, I was approving the program at the moment Mackall was telling the nespapers that I was blocking it."

Following the conference yesterday Senator Tydings announced that the entire Maryland works program was ready to start. He said that work on projects under Dryden's direction will begin immediately and that PWA work will be launched as rapidly as details can be settled.

"Senator Radcliffe and I can see no reason why a large part of this program can not be under way within 30 days," Senator Tydings said.

A total of $12,000,000 has been allotted for counties, Tydings said. This money will be spent under direction of the Works Progress Administration. Funds for Baltimore City will be contributed as follows: By the city, $10,625,000; PWA, $9,000,000, and WPA, $13,000,000.

Meanwhile, Hopkins announced a sharp drop in the number of persons on relief in June as compared with May. A total of 281,000 families and 88,000 individuals were dropped from the relief rolls. It was estimated that the decrease totaled 1,313,000 persons, bringing the total number on relief in June down to 17,937,000. This compares with 20,669,647 in January.

Don't Mention It.

A City of Refuge.

FELICITY. One of the very best words in the language. And when do you find it used now, except in some such phrase as "felicity of expression," where it means something perilously close to exactness, precision, accuracy. The warmth has gone out, leaving a hard, quantitative, scientific, "modern" air. That is the history of so very many things.

"Feliciana" (Scribner, $2.50) is Stark Young's urbane, rather elliptical protest to such change—a volume of sketches and stories, retrieved from magazines of the last few years, which sometimes look back in time and sometimes look just around the corner for that warmth, richness, and fullness of living we all want to touch. He finds it, in the first story, among that far-flung McGehee clan who strolled through the pages of "So Red the Rose." He finds it among Southern country Negroes, house servants for the most part—the brief accounts here of various conversations with them are true and delightful. He finds it among Creole cooks in New Orleans, compounding their fabulous and delectable recipes with a joyous zeal which can be expressed only in the phrase of Celimene: "Cookin' is a jalous business."

Most clearly we see it in Mrs. L———'s old uncle, now past 80, who would never "trouble a man unless he needs killin'." Uncle had had a chockful life—you should read how he got along with the efficient lady journalist who came out to transcribe it!—and in every little anecdote about him which Mr. Young narrates we can share the feeling of Mrs. L——— when "she laughs and hugs herself with pleasure at the way life has found itself in this old man; at the volume of living that has gone through him, as it were; at the panorama that this tall, skinny body has contained, the so much blood—speaking Shakespeareanwise—that's in him."

AND if that quality is to be found in Feliciana, Terre Bonne, Parlange—all Southern parish and plantation names redolent of the rich living in question—it is not, Mr. Young says, and implies even more strongly, to be found on Fourth avenue, State street, or Broad. It is not, save in memory or in such back-waters as he describes, seemingly to be found in America at all. The old Monsignore at Livorno—a handful of the sketches are placed in Italy—had met one of the most attractive of our exemplars, a young man from New York, full of a sort of "nursery goodness" and a desire to achieve great things in authorship. He wanted to "make good," to "grab at art" (one sees plainly Mr. Young's parable on all America). And the Monsignore's comment, possibly only to the very old and the very wise, was only to mention the "innocent notion of all beautiful achievement as in the nature of a raid."

A deeper criticism is spoken. It is the same Monsignore who says: "These days, however, everybody is himself without reference to any idea. Everybody is himself without reference to anything larger than himself; and so nobody is anybody." The remark has something of Gertrude Stein's sybilline quality. But then we look back at the cook and the game warden and Virgil, the chatty Negro, and old Uncle and all the others, and we see how richly they were themselves "without reference to any idea," and we see further that even the old churchman does not come quite to the point.

For "Feliciana" is in praise of the old, natural self-respecting life, to pack volumes into a phrase. And if, to so many of us (Mr. Young included), it looks like a far-off and almost unattainable city of refuge, it can not be denied that in the mere remembering it, looking at it, reading of it, there is a capturing of felicity in the old and fine sense.

The Once Over

The G. O. P. on the Air.

The Republican National Committee, launching a drive to make Mr. Roosevelt the forgotten man, has retained what it calls "a radio man," and will go on the air in a big way. Suggestions for a suitable name for the radio feature:

1. Little Journeys Through Forgotten America.
2. The Anti-Thru-the-Rapids-By-Pogo-Stick Program.
3. Under the Tight Rope with Pen and Camera.

• • • •

The plan is to sell the idea that G. O. P. face cream will remove the wrinkle from prosperity and that no matter how sick you are, Republican pills are more satisfying than those Democratic operations.

• • • •

The program will open with the faint strains of a theme song. "Throw Out the Lifeline" and "Memories" have been rejected by the G. O. P. radio board, as has "Every Little Bit Added to What You've Got Makes a Little Bit More."

• • • •

There will be the usual chimes by the Swiss Bell Ringers of the Old Guard, a little stiff from inaction, but still in there trying.

• • • •

Mr. Henry P. Fletcher, "your station announcer," will then say a few well-chosen words announcing that this is the National Republican or Back to Rhythmic Dancing and Unhampered Breathing Hour, coming to you over a national network. "If you are not getting this program distinctly, go up on the roof and see if some Democrat has monkeyed with your outside aerial."

• • • •

Mr. Fletcher will then ask "How do you like your broader life, with or without bacon?" And announce unashamedly that the G. O. P. is against experiments with the social structure while going over Niagara Falls in a rubber ball.

• • • •

The 1928 Melody Boys will favor with a vocal number, and there will be string music by the Coolidge Prosperity Gypsies.

• • • •

There will be an organ recital if Jim Farley hasn't sabotaged the organ, songs by the Capital Hill Billies of 1918-1932, and then the real feature of the program, the appearance of the G. O. P. Golden Voice of the Air, as yet unidentified.

• • • •

Senate Revolt On Wealth Tax Is Seen Likely

DemocratsOpposed to Bill; Progressives Seek to Raise Rates.

rebellion against all parts of the tax bill, while they will be supported by several Republicans. On the other hand, several members of that committee, while favorable to the President's proposals, feel that the House bill goes much too far in increasing surtax rates on incomes as low as $50,000 a year and in applying the inheritance taxes on estates of less than $300,000.

Led by the militant Senator Robert M. La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, a small group on the Finance Committee would extend the increases to even lower incomes. La Follette plans to propose an amendment increasing the normal tax from 4 to 6 per cent, which would hit every existing income taxpayer and decreasing the present personal exemptions of $2,500 and $1,000 for married and single persons, respectively.

In view of these conflicting views as to what should be done with the tax bill it is impossible at this time to make any forecast of the form in which it will come from the Finance Committee. But it is certain that the committee consideration of the bill will require time.

Chairman Pat Harrison of the Finance Committee, after an absence of several days from the city, returned yesterday and took charge of the situation. He said that his committee would meet morning, afternoon and possibly at night, each day until the bill is reported to the Senate. He expressed the hope that this might be done Monday with debate starting the next day.

Delay Again Urged.

In concluding his testimony, Alvord again made a plea that action on the tax bill be deferred until a more detailed study of the subject could be made and the Treasury's future needs be more accurately appraised. He urged that business and individuals be given an opportunity to develop some income that might be taxed. He pointed out that when he helped congressional committees to draft tax bills it usually took a year.

The pending bill would levy a graduated excess profits tax ranging from 5 to 20 per cent on corporation net income in excess of 8 per cent of its "adjusted declared value." This provision was written into the bill after the House spurned the sharply graduated corporation income taxes proposed by President Roosevelt on June 29.

The Treasury and the Chamber of Commerce have one thing, at least, in common in their attitude toward the excess profits tax. While he did not flatly oppose such a levy, Robert H. Jackson, Internal Revenue Bureau counsel, on Wednesday pointed out the difficulties of equitably administering such a tax and argued that it should not be enacted as a substitute for the President's graduated corporation tax schedule.

Excess-Profit Tax Arbitrary.

Alvord regarded the weakness of this tax in the provision that excess profits should be based on "adjusted declared value" of a corporation's assets. He held such a tax base to be "a purely arbitrary and fictitious figure having no conceivable relation to the reasonableness of the income or the capacity to pay."

"Liability for the tax is not determined by real values or existing facts," he asserted, after describing how the figure is computed. "Luck in guessing future income is the governing factor. Taxation of this nature is merely a lottery."

The House Ways and Means Committee made the basis of its excess-profits tax "adjusted declared value," in order to avoid the many difficulties in administration attendant on the war-time excess-profits taxes, Alvord pointed out. The existing capital stock tax, and the existing excess-profits tax, enacted to make the former effective, are based on "declared adjusted value" and the committee grafted the new excess-profits tax on that basis.

"The capital stock tax imposed by the 1934 act is exceedingly objectionable and should be amended to permit an annual declaration of value," Alvord asserted. "But an attempt to use it as a basis for an excess-profits tax at the sharply graduated rates proposed in this bill is wholly without justification.

"Unequal burdens, unfair discrimination, illogical and unforeseeable liabilities, continuing uncertainties and prolonged controversies must be the consequence to the taxpayers. Undeserved revenues and an exceedingly difficult, if not impossible, administration must be the consequence to the Treasury."

Hypothetical Cases Cited.

Like the other Chamber of Commerce spokesmen, Alvord illustrated his contentions with hypothetical cases of corporations which would be unjustly burdened by the tax. He also pointed out that whatever tax relief is given to small corporations by the moderate graduated corporation tax proposed in the bill would be more than offset by increased payments required under the excess profits tax.

Alvord read to the committee a report made by Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, when he was Secretary of the Treasury in 1919, objecting to the excess profits tax even as a war expedient, but especially in peace time.

At that time the Glass report stated that this form of levy "encourages wasteful expenditure, puts a premium on over-capitalization and a penalty on brains, energy and enterprise, discourages new ventures, and confirms old ventures in their monopolies."

"In many instances," the Glass report quoted by Alvord added, "it acts as a consumption tax, is added to the cost of production and upon which profits are figured in determining prices, and has been, and will, so long as it is maintained on the statute books, continue to be a material factor in the increased cost of living."

Vandenberg Speaks for Ford.

Vandenberg pointed out that the effect of the proposed inheritance taxes on large industrial units like the Ford Motor Co. had been a source of constant speculation and, that—referring to Jackson testimony earlier in the week—"the authors of this new tax program themselves have confessed their own uneasy trepidation in this connection by volunteering numerous suggestions how the Ford operations—involving the welfare of 150,000 direct employes—might be saved from slaughter when this proposed confiscatory program becomes effective."

Although the Ford property centers in the State he represents, Vandenberg said he was speaking his personal conclusions and that neither Henry nor Edsel Ford had communicated with him on the subject. Under the proposed "confiscatory" inheritance tax, Vandenberg said, the Ford company would "cease to be a tremendous industrial unit, governed by an anxiety singularly dedicated to the production of high grade commodities at lowest possible cost to the ultimate consumer, and to the employment of hundreds of thousands of highest paid artisans."

"It will be driven into diversified ownership, which can come only through enormous ultimate stock sales to the public," he continued. "It will be forced out of the close control which has preferred the creation of a vast and effective instrumentality of employment and commerce rather than the disbursement of personal dividends."

Hamilton Hotel To Give Lessons By 'Mixologist'

New Orleans Bartender to Show Patrons How to Mix Drinks.

By Chanticleer.

Way back in the corn country they call them bartenders. But when they become especially proficient at putting odds and ends of firewater together, they become mixologists.

As a matter of fact a cocktail always will remain for me the traditional mystery that it is for thousands of other untutored Washingtonians. Take an Alexander, for example. It looks simple on paper . . . with a minimum of ingredients. Surely any hay-slinger should be able to put up a good Alexander.

But what I've had in the course of one evening in the name of the exalted Alexander would slay you. The bartenders seem to have studied different texts.

The point is that Dick Butler . . . Hamilton's boss . . . has the honor of presenting the real goods in a "mixologist" tonight between the hours of 9 and 11.

• • • •

John J. King is his name . . . and he hails from New Orleans where a cocktail is a thing of beauty and precision. In fact Mr. King specializes in cocktails and fizzes made with the famous New Orleans Peychaud Bitters.

It's an opportunity not to be passed lightly by . . . what with Mr. King right there in the Hamilton's new Rainbow Room . . . with his hands full of makings and the proper procedure illustrated for your future guidance.

Drop in and see how those delectable concoctions really are put together.

Cecil Ellington has won the battle of the Potomac. It seems that the estimable Bernie Levy, of the Hangar Club, knowing of Maestro Ellington's reputation and the collective reputation of the maestro's band . . . signed them, thinking that it was time for the band to begin the evening routine. "But we'll settle this later. I want seven men!"

Well, it started all over again the next day and went on for three, four and five days. "Seven," said Mr. Levy. "Nine," said Mr. Ellington.

Last night Mr. Levy was patting his foot on the floor in time to Mr. Ellington's syncopations.

"Great band," said Mr. Levy. "You know, a seven-piece band isn't in it with a nine-piece band."

And . . . in truth . . . it's a swell band. But Mr. Ellington won.

Working on the theory that a bad first impression . . . no matter how trivial it may have been . . . is sometimes lasting in the after-dark business . . . Maryland Club Gardens has placed at the door two of the most congenial personalities you'll ever meet—Charlie Hunter and Leo Toss. Its "hello Charlie" and "how are you, Leo" when you go to the Gardens that second time. And Charlie and Leo don't forget you, either, from one visit to another. Belle Regis . . . who wrote and sang a song for President Roosevelt at his Hyde Park home . . . they do say . . . is headlining the Gardens floor show this week.

Not for one fleeting second would I let a feline out of the burlap . . . but a well-founded rumor indicates that the Mayfair will soon have a contest, and who doesn't like a bit of a contest now and then? The idea of this one will be to give the Mayfair's new bar a name. I like it. Bars ought to have names.

Never a week passes, but I'm not impressed with the fact the age of miracles has not yet passed. Now there's the case of Jim and Bill who agree on everything . . . including girl friends. Monday they took luncheon at the Lotus . . . what with Elaine's Society Steppers being present in goodly numbers and unusual comeliness. Each sat down for the floor show with the silent conviction they would both like one and the same sparkling little dancer. But . . . Jim kept his attention on the little brunette on the left end (that would be Virginia MacPherson) and Bill didn't see the rest of the crew for the slender blonde at the right end (who would be Frances Seidler). And that stuck through all five numbers of the chorus.

Conrad Siebold is in Frank McNey's shoes these days at Ambassador's Hi-Hat . . . while McNey is vacationing down the bay. Conrad has been headwaiter at the Ambassador for five years . . . coming from the Biltmore in Los Angeles. Born in Bavaria, he has served distinguished guests in Paris, London and other continental centers. Just eight years ago he came to the United States . . . to cap more than 30 years in the hotel business.

The feminine parts of the Shoreham's Terrace dance teams of late have been running to brunettes. But this week Audrey (of Audrey and Severin) adds a graceful and coquettish blonde atmosphere. It's their second week . . . having been held over by popular acclaim. Corrine and Maebelle, "Sisters of Grace," do tap and toe dancing in music-comedy style and the Frazer Brothers top off the Terrace's floor show with a novelty equilibristic turn.

The Mayflower's cocktail lounge check-up on drinks shows that the julep leads in the popular taste. Next, not too far behind, are the Planter's punch. Maestro Ellington appeared with nine.

"Who are these two extra horn blowers?" queried Mr. Levy.

"They aren't 'extra,'" replied Mr. Ellington. "They're a regular part of the band."

"But I want seven men—and no more," insisted Mr. Levy.

"My band isn't that kind of a band," says Mr. Ellington. "It's nine or none the way we play things.

Note—The predictions given here represent the time of high and low water at shore at the various places specified, not necessarily the time of current changes. In Chesapeake Bay, midchannel, between Chesapeake Beach and Annapolis, slack water occurs about 2½ hours to 4½ hours after high and low water at shore. At other points (except Wachapreague Inlet) the change of current occurs from ½ hour to 1½ hours after high and low water.

Work to Begin Soon on Road In Arlington

MemorialBridge-Boulevard Link Is Approved by State Highway.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Work is expected to start soon on construction of the connecting link between Station 107 in Lyon Park and the Arlington Memorial Bridge, completing the Lee boulevard from the bridge to Falls Church, it was learned at the courthouse yesterday.

The State highway department has completed its survey from Lyon Park to the bridge and County Manager Roy S. Braden says that as soon as maps are available the rights of way will be acquired

The United States Bureau of Public Roards has approved the route of the boulevard to the bridge and Braden says he can see no further delays.

Completion of the boulevard to the bridge will bring to a close efforts of eight years by county officials, representatives of civic groups in the county and the State highway department to give an adequate approach to the bridge.

The request made by the Clarendon Business Men's Association recently to provide adequate parking space in Clarendon will be met by the county as soon as arrangements can be made with owners of vacant land in that area, County Manager Roy S. Braden stated last night.

The county is ready to grade the ground and provide adequate lighting in sections of Clarendon, where vacant land is available, as soon as owners assure the county that it may be used.

Parking provisions in the business section of Clarendon are badly needed, Braden said, but reasonable assurance must be given the county that the vacant land can be used.

The Virginia Public Service Co. has received instructions to add another high powered street light in the Clarendon business area, it was learned at the office of the county manager yesterday.

In addition to lights already installed plans are now being made to improve the fixtures with a globe covering the light to remove glare.

With the Democratic primary over, Charles R. Fenwick, chairman of the county Democratic executive committee, appeals to the voters to forget the bitterness of the campaign which preceded Tuesday's election and work for the success of the whole Democratic ticket in the November general election.

"The primary is over and we want harmony in the party," Fenwick declared. "The campaign was hard fought, but that should not prevent us all from throwing our shoulders to the wheel and electing our ticket."

Fenwick said he would call a meeting of the new executive committee within the next two weeks to discuss plans for the election.

After more than two hours' discussion on proposals for zoning ordinance changes in the Fort Myer area, the zoning appeal board, meeting at the courthouse yesterday afternoon, took the matter under consideration and will render a decision early next week.

A proposal was made by the owners of the Colonial Village Corporation to change one section of their land from residential A to local business. It developed that one section was zoned for local business in the area when they built the apartment, but it was used and now ask that another strip be so zoned.

Another proposal was made through attorneys representing owners of land on the opposite side of Wilson boulevard, fronting the apartment, that their land be zoned from residential A to local business.

It was claimed that erection of the apartment house has destroyed the values for residents.

Representatives of the apartment stated that they did not object to proposed changes of some sections on the opposite side of the street, but were opposed to a general rezoning of the entire section.

The Arlington County Monarch Club will hold its weekly luncheon meeting today at 12:30 o'clock at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

Fish Replenished In Virginia Waters

By the Associated Press.

Newport News, Va., Aug. 8.—Five hundred thousand bushels of oyster shells, 14,000 seed oysters and 2,000,000 clams have been bedded on Virginia bottoms, and 2,000 terrapin and 2,000,000 shad eggs have been stocked in shore country waters, as a result of the replenishment program of the Virginia Fisheries Commission this year, Richard Armstrong, chairman, announced today.

Crediting Federal authorities with assisting in the work more than ever before, Armstrong pointed out that the marine life restocked by the commission was subject to a variety of hazards beyond man's control, but barring catastrophes of nature should produce a sizable crop.

The commission planned to plant 10,000,000 shad eggs, but was able to get only 2,000,000 because of an unexplained scarcity.

U. S. to Start Institute Of Nature Study at V.P.I.

By the Associated Press.

The Virginia Polytechnic Institute at Blacksburg yesterday was chosen by the Department of Agriculture for the establishment of the first of nine institutes to be opened for study and survey of wild life. The department expects to offer at V. P. I. courses in the regular college curriculum.

The Agriculture Department said the choice of V. P. I., a land grant college, was due largely to co-operation of the college, the State of Virginia and A. Willis Robertson (Democrat), Virginia, of Lexington, who formerly was the State Game and Inland Fisheries Commissioner.

Town Orders Judge Arrested; He's Willing; Legal Cogs Jam

At the left is Town Attorney F. Barnard Welsh, who has been instructed to get a warrant for Police Magistrate Harold C. Smith, on overtime parking charges. At the right is Town Bailiff Leslie B. Thompson, who reportedly gave Smith the original parking ticket and who is in readiness to serve the warrant.

Rockville Solicitor Stumped; Circuit Judge Advises Him Against Drawing Up Warrant; Magistrate Tells His Side of Parking Case.

With the representative of the Rockville Town Council temporarily halted by legal by-ways, Rockville Police Court Judge Harold C. Smith yesterday was cheerfully awaiting arrest at the council's order on a charge of overtime parking.

F. Barnard Welsh, town attorney, was exploring law books to determine how a justice of the peace can act as a police magistrate, issue a warrant for the judge and try his case.

From Judge Smith's attitude it would appear that Welsh's latter purpose will not be needed, as the judge evidently intends to forfeit collateral. He said: "I have not been served with anything yet. If I am properly served with a warrant I will post my collateral with a smile."

Authority in Question.

Welsh's difficulties were these: He had been given authority by the council to draw up a warrant for the judge's arrest. Believing this to be extra-legal, he asked Circuit Court Judge Arthur D. Willard to name a justice of the peace to draw up the warrant. Judge Willard did not believe that would be legal on the grounds that such a designation should be made by the Governor, who appoints the justices of the peace.

This left arrest hanging over the head of Judge Smith while Judge Willard and Welsh delved further into the legal method to bring to the bar a judge who would be forced to try himself if the parking violation had been handled in the routine mnnner.

Judge Smith yesterday gave his side of the case. He said:

"This whole thing is evidently due to a misunderstanding. The officer (the newly appointed zealous town bailiff, Leslie B. Thompson) said that I told him I would not convict anyone, but the town council has not asked me if this were so. I have not entered into any controversy with them.

"In spite of this unfortunate affair, I will continue to try town cases with the same impartiality that I try to observe in all cases brought before me. I don't believe that anyone can say that I have not tried to administer justice impartially.

Judge Denies Notice.

"If a proper warrant is served, I have no intention of challenging the laws of Rockville. I may have parked my car overtime, but I have had no official notice."

The judge said that he believed Bailiff Thompson had become displeased with his dismissal of a case of disorderly conduct against Talmadge Watkins. This case was dismissed, the judge said, because the State's attorney, James Jugh, did not wish to prosecute, saying the affair was evidently based upon a personal disagreement between Watkins and Thompson.

Pugh declared that he wished it understood that he favored the dismissal of the charge against Watkins because he believed there was insufficient evidence on which to hold him.

During the hours that Judge Smith spent at the courthouse yesterday he moved his car every two hours.

R. J. Berry Gets A Beer License Despite Protest

Prince Georges Refuses to Grant Permit for Sale at Meadow View.

In spite of opposition from a delegation of approximately 50 citizens, the Prince Georges County liquor commissioners yesterday granted an off-sale beer license to Richard J. Berry, of Oxon Hill, Md.

The delegation, presenting a petition said to bear 107 names, declared the establishment was too close to a church, and that school children loiter in that vicinity.

The commissioners, however, refused to issue an on-sale beer license to Winston R. Thorne, of Meadow View, Md. The issuance was opposed by an equally large delegation, and a petition said to bear 300 names. The citizens said they did not want beer sold in that neighborhood.

The board also held up an application for similar license, submitted by Presley Ward, of near Fort Washington, on the ground there was already a license on the premises.

No one appeared to receive the license for the Lord Calvert Inn, College Park, Md., so the issuance was held over until the next meeting.

On-sale beer licenses were issued to Erick A. Gebhardt, of Silver Hill, and Carl S. Ritchie, of Ritchie, Md. There were no protests.

Vienna Weighs Plans to Seek Federal Grant

$50,000 Loan for Water System May Be Asked by Council.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

Methods of obtaining a $50,000 loan from the Federal Government for construction of a town water system were outlined to the Vienna Town Council at a recent meeting by a representative of the McGrary Engineering Co. of Atlanta, Ga., which several years ago prepared plans and specifications for the town.

A definite decision to make formal application for such a loan was postponed until a special meeting to be held next week. The prevailing sentiment among members of the council and numerous taxpayers who attended the meeting appeared to be that since Vienna will have to share with the rest of the country in paying back the $4,000,000,000 loan for public works, it might as well get something in exchange.

If a $50,000 grant is made, $22,500 would represent an outright gift. The town would have to bond itself for the balance of $27,500, with the expectation that within one year's time the water rents would be sufficient to carry the interest on the bond issue and reduce the principal.

Plans call for approximately six miles of pipe, covering the entire town. This would include 47 fire hydrants. It is estimated that approximately 75 private connections would be made as soon as a town water supply is available, many residents who have large investments in private pumps being interested solely because of fire protection and increase of real estate values. No detailed survey of the town to determine the number of subscribers will be made until it is ascertained whether the loan will be granted.

The treasurer reported that approximately $700 has been collected in delinquent taxes and that he expects most of the ten or more taxpayers who are still delinquent in large amounts to pay before the new books are drawn.

C. Arthur Thompson was appointed a member of the council to succeed Stanley Twombley.

The Business and Professional Women's Club of Fairfax County, Va., has decided to hold its annual membership drive meeting in September instead of October. The banquet will be held September 19 in Briarwood Manor. Miss Ramey, of Alexandria, will speak on the proceedings of the national convention in Seattle.

Miss Alice Crutchfield, home demonstration agent, has called off all 4-H Club meetings until after August 17, acting on advice of the State and county health authorities, to avoid any gatherings of children until danger from infantile paralysis is past.

The county camp which was to have been held at Jamestown in July, and which was tentatively postponed until August, has been canceled definitely.

By the Associated Press.

Leaksville, Va., Aug. 8.—William J. Andes, 20, a graduate of Elon College, was ordained today by a Presbytery which included his father, A. W. Andes, of Harrisonburg, pastor of the Leaksville Church, where valley churchmen are holding their annual conference.

After presentation of a Bible to the young minister by his father, the youth left for North Carolina, where he will preach while attending Duke Divinity School. The conference unanimously chose him to deliver the principal address at next year's conference. He is the youngest preacher ever accorded this honor.

R. L. Williamson, vice president, was elevated to the presidency. Other officers are J. C. Bradford, vice president; A. W. Andes, secretary; Samuel Earman, treasurer; K. B. Hook, Winchester, director of religious education; R. O. Rothgeb, Luray, mission secretary, and Minnie Doffiemyre, Elkton, stewardship secretary.

Next year's meeting will be held at Antioch, near Harrisonburg.

Fire Volunteers Gather Tonight At Riverdale

13th Annual Convention to Be in Full Swing Tomorrow.

Following registration in the Riverdale (Md.) Firehouse tonight at 6:30 o'clock, the thirteenth annual convention of the Prince Georges County Volunteer Fire Association will open in the local school auditorium.

The first business session will consist of a hearing of the annual reports, nomination of officers for next year, and the selection of a location for the next convention. C. Earl Wyvill, of Upper Marlboro, president, will preside.

The Women's Auxiliary will open its seventh annual convention at the schoolhouse at 11 a. m. Saturday. The afternoon will be taken up with a field day program, primarily for the men.

There will be a parade, after which prizes will be given for the best unit in line. Then there will be a contest in firefighting, hose laying, hookup and first aid. The contests are open to all volunteer companies in Prince Georges, Montgomery and Arlington counties.

A feature of the field day program will be a competition and draft pumper contest for the Livingston cup. If won three years in succession, the cup is retained permanently. Riverdale has received it twice in succession.

Following a dinner at the Riverdale Presbyterian Church tomorrow, both firemen and auxiliary women will reconvene at the schoolhouse for the closing session. A dance will be held that night.

Lawson Asked To Attend Rally

Maryland State Chairman's Presence to Minimize Attacks on Nice.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 8.—The ranks of those adherents of Gov. Harry W. Nice who will attend the meeting of Republican State Senators in Ocean City Saturday was strengthened today by William P. Larson, chairman of the State Republican committee.

Lawson was invited by Senator O. Straughn Lloyd (Republican), Wicomico, who made first arrangements for the meeting. In his invitation to Lawson, Lloyd denied that the meeting was called "to criticize or persecute anyone."

However, Senator Harry Phoebus (Republican), Somerset, has announced that he would launch a campaign against former United States Senator O. E. Weller at the meeting. Other Senators have said that they intended to discuss their dissatisfaction with the handling of patronage in the State.

Until Lawson was invited, it appeared that attendance at the meeting would consist of one Senator known to be loyal to the Governor, two who were inimical to him and a bloc of others whose attitude was unknown. Lawson is known to be unswervingly devoted to Gov. Nice's interests. Political observers considered it unlikely that criticism of the Governor would be voiced in the presence of the chairman of the State committee.

In his letter to Lawson, Lloyd intimated that the meeting was being given a political significance that he did not intend it to have.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

"Unloving" Blessed Far Beyond Her Desserts, Provoked Reader Thinks.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I was much interested in a letter that appeared in your column of August 1, signed "Unloving." In it the writer complained because, after two years of satisfactory married life (she said she had now been married six years) she began to see flaws in her husband and in the institution of marriage.

To many readers this person would seem blessed far beyond her desserts. She says she has two of the most desirable elements of living: plenty of time and plenty of money, and if in addition she also found two satisfactory years of marriage, she has had more than many a resigned wife who has made the best of things and lived to smile placidly on her golden wedding day.

"Unloving" is interesting not as an individual but as a type that is frequently encountered and is frequently articulate. Many wives complain when their husbands do not provide continuous entertainment for them, and they resent it when their husbands become absorbed in business. They are the spoiled children of the earth. For the most part they are highly egocentric and though they bring little to the marriage partnership themselves, they expect their husbands to burn incense before them year in and year out.

• • • •

Do you agree with me that such women are not properly prepared for life and that their early education and training are at fault? They expect the impossible of marriage. They concentrate on the superficialities of life and never dream of developing their own resources. Success does not mean for them the cum laude degree at college or the development of a skill or art, but merely collecting more suitors or being better dressed than their immediate friends. The climax of their lives is marrying a rich, handsome and devoted husband. If the man of their choice fails in any one of these particulars the bubble bursts and such a wife feels that she has been cheated.

• • • •

This business of living is a complex process. Love is one of the most important factors in it, but certainly it is not the only one that can produce happiness. For "Unloving," concentration on marriage seems to have run its course. Would she not do well to investigate some of the other phases of life that bring their own satisfaction?

• • • •

Her husband has found his business engrossing. If "Unloving has even vestigial interest in anything else she might find it useful to cultivate such interest in the hope that it may develop into a full-fledged hobby. She has plenty of time and plenty of money. She should use both of these marvelous gifts to the full. She is living in one of the most interesting cities in the orld, where something happens every day of the year.

• • • •

The arts will repay unlimited cultivation. Sports bring both satisfaction and good health to their devotees and there are other avenues of approach to peace of mind. The discontented wife in this day and age need not sit and wring her hands; neither need she leave her husband. She can fill her days so full of useful, satisfactory activity that when evening comes she will be content to sit across the table from him and rest up for future activities.

• • • •

But first she must grow beyond the adolescent attitude of mind which sees only clothes, parties and admiration as matters of importance. Sincerely,

ELEANOR GRAY.

The Princess Complex.

DEAR ELEANOR GRAY: Psychologists are thoroughly acquainted with women of "Unloving's" type, who start married life under the handicap of a princess complex. Such women expect to walk through the glamorous gates of matrimony into a sort of Never-Never land, there to live happily ever after through no particular effort of their own. Unless they grow beyond that "adolescent attitude of mind" which you so discerningly detect and so aptly describe, they are practically committed to a life of disillusionment, discontent and pettishness. In your foregoing letter you've done a very good job of showing such women the path to take out of their self-inflicted unhappiness. Thank you for the contribution.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Since Woman's Adaptability Has Conquered in Business, She'd Better Drop Crispness

By Malvina Lindsay.
Woman's Page Editor.

MAN'S NOSTALGIA for the good old Victorian days when he was master of his home, and his wife and children quailed at his voice has caused him to recreate in his business office a feminine kingdom of which he is czar. This theory is advanced in an article in the current Fortune Magazine as one reason for woman's conquest of the office field.

• • • • •

The article, the second in a series on "Women in Business," explodes the masculine tradition that women are hounds at detail and experts at routine, and it also questions whether their willingness to work for low wages has given them predominance as secretaries and stenographers. It suggests rather that women are in offices mainly because men want them there, because the male employer, deposed as the sultan of his home, wants to bolster up his bruised ego by an office seraglio of docile, adaptable, pleasant daytime wives.

• • • •

If this theory be true, women should take heart. For if they are in business offices chiefly to cater to masculine vanity, not all the dictators in the world will be able to relegate them permanently to the kitchen.

EVEN IF MEN should succeed in putting women back in the home they would never be able to exact from them the worshipful obedience that was given the male of a nineteenth century household. Women, having had their taste of social freedom, having tried their economic wings and learned their own strength, will never again take too seriously the patriarchal tyrant. Man may be able to build again the shell of the old-fashioned home but in it he will find himself only a puppet ruler.

• • • •

So long as men are men they will be served, but the only way they can insure themselves service is to pay for it. The day has passed when feminine indenture can be obtained on any pin money basis. Only a pay check at the end of the week or the month will turn the trick.

• • • •

Moreover no man employer accustomed to an office force of tractable women, most of whom are merely waiting around to get married, will find it easy to adapt himself to a horde of pushing ambitious, rambunctious boys and young men who are impatiently waiting to take over his job. Men are not the adapters of the race and never will be and that is why both outside and inside the home they need to be complemented by women.

FROM ALL THIS the woman in a business office may get one valuable hint—the necessity of making herself pleasant. No one will deny that she should also be efficient, but it will be much easier to duplicate her skill at the typewriter than her feminine tact and adaptability.

• • • •

Older women who complain that doors to business offices are closed against them or that they are discriminated against within the office should particularly remember that it is more often their lack of resiliency than their lack of pulchritude that makes them unacceptable to a man employer. Smug, sure of themselves, set in their ways, they can not be told anything, can not learn anything. Unless a woman is a genius, she can not afford to become jellied or hardboiled in a business office. And yet, strangely enough, the current vogue of crispness and self-assertiveness on the part of business women is most commonly found among the second-raters.

• • • •

Women, if they expect to maintain their hold in the business world, might as well face the fact that adaptability is their chief asset, and, without becoming craven, make the most of their talent. Nor should adaptability be decried. Used with intelligence, it is the surest means of growth. It is the basis of all evolution. It is woman's best bet on her future.

British Woman Doctor Calls Own Sex Foes

Men Have More Faith in Us in England, Declares Dr. Edith Shannon.

WOMEN, rather than men, are the worst enemies of feminine physicians in England, according to Dr. Edith Shannon, who recently visited in Washington with other members of the British Medical Association.

"Men apparently have more faith in our ability than women," she said. "Why this is so, I've never been able to figure out, but I believe almost any woman doctor in England would affirm what I've just said."

Yet Dr. Shannon is not discouraged. A widely known health lecturer, she has had much opportunity the past few years to observe women physicians throughout England and Scotland, and she is convinced that despite obstacles they are coming to the fore.

Advantages in Some Fields.

"In some fields of medicine we already have an equal chance with men, or perhaps some advantage," she said. Gyneology (the treatment of diseases of women) and pediatrics (the treatment of diseases of children) are particularly suitable specialties for women physicians, she believes. "Surgery, general practice and even obstetrics offer a woman far less opportunity to prove she has a unique contribution to make to medicine," she went on. "You see, in the professions, as in any other line of public work, women today must show they have something unusual to give, or they will be forced out and replaced by men. That is why I generally advise young women physicians to become pediatricians."

In this connection, she mentioned that infant welfare clinics, now so popular throughout England, had given women child specialists their great chance.

Breaks Down Prejudices.

A mother who brings her children to a clinic sees, often for the first time, a woman physician discharging her duties effectively and with as successful results as a man, Dr. Shannon explained. "Feminine prejudice against the woman doctor is thus broken down, the mother in the case tells other mothers, who in turn bring their children, and a practice is soon established," she added.

From discussing British women physicians and their chances in modern times, Dr. Shannon went to revealing some of her impressions of this country.

Composite Picture of Ideal Secretary

Qualifications Are Listed by Three Capital Authorities.

By Dudley Harmon.

THE PERFECT secretary, the dream woman employers long for when things go wrong at the office, would, if she were made to order, have the following qualifications:

She would be between 18 and 30 years of age.

She would be easy to look at.

Her clothes would be neat and stylish, and her hair and fingernails well groomed.

She'd have enough initiative and knowledge of the business to take entire charge of the office when her boss went away, but she would be subservient at all times to her employer's wishes.

Poise and Personality.

She'd be sufficiently poised and pleasing in personality to be able to turn people away without making them think they'd been turned down.

Such is the perfect secretary, according to views expressed by three authorities who ought to know what they're talking about. The discussion was begun apropos of the "ideal secretary" selected at the national convention of Alpha Iota, a business woman's sorority, held recently at Salt Lake City. She is Miss Alene Walker, of Portland, Oreg. The three Washingtonians who expressed opinions on the matter are A. C. Wright, director of the Boyd Secretarial School; Mrs. A. C. Beaver, director and vice president of the Washington School for Secretaries, and Miss Rae R. Murray, president of the Washington Branch of the Business and Professional Women's Club.

Mrs. Beaver drew a sharp distinction between the qualifications necessary to obtain a job and those requisite to holding one. In getting a position, she rates looks and personality as 75 per cent of what it takes.

"Once the job is obtained, however," she said, "ability is the most important qualification. One's typing, shorthand and grasp of office detail should be absolutely letter perfect."

Miss Murray Prefers Efficiency.

Mr. Wright believes that in a front office, where the employe is required to meet many people, personality counts more than anything else. In the lower-paid jobs in an inner office, such as a filing room, he considers that looks are relatively unimportant. Miss Murray would not rate efficiency above either looks or personality. She believes the ideal age for a secretary is between 25 and 30 years.

Employers, it seems, are pretty good judges of appearance. Outside the office they may prefer fluffy blondes in trailing chiffon gowns, but when it comes to business, they want just the opposite. Ruffles, fluff-dub and hair like a Fiji Islander's rub them the wrong way. They like quiet clothes, with an air of distinction, and well-groomed heads with every hair in place.

Raving beauties are not as much in demand in the office as one might think. In fact, the dizzy red head with creamy skin and sapphire eyes is thought by some employers to be a definite distraction when it comes to work. They prefer instead merely a general appearance of good health, neatness and cheerfulness.

Make-up Important.

All three of these authorities agreed that make-up occupies an important place in one's job. They turned thumbs down on the over-painted, over-powdered young woman, but were unanimous in the opinion that it doesn't pay to look pale and sickly if you can prevent it with a little make-up discreetly applied. A shiny nose and a pasty complexion are almost as detrimental to success as an exaggerated cupid's bow.

Efficiency, of course, is what counts most in the long run, they said. The eager, enthusiastic person who learns all she can about her employer's business, and who is right there on the spot when a problem comes up, has every chance of succeeding. And, although the woman over 40 has a more difficult time in obtaining a job than does a younger person, she need never worry about losing one if she is efficient.

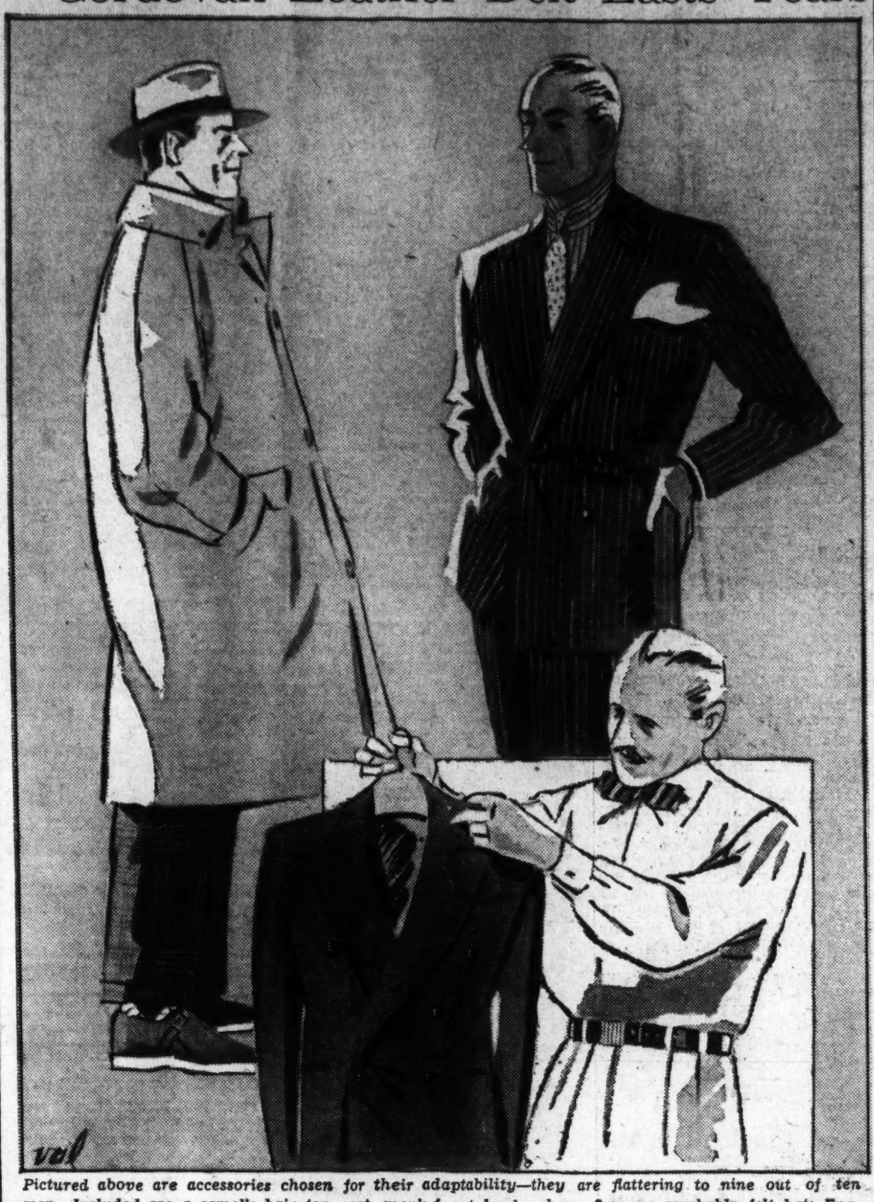
Variety of Light Felt Hats Displayed; Cordovan Leather Belt Lasts Years



Pictured above are accessories chosen for their adaptability—they are flattering to nine out of ten men. Included are a camel's hair top coat, monk-front bucko shoes, 2-ounce crushable felt hat; English cut lounge suit, simply cut navy blue sports jacket and a cordovan leather belt featuring a special buckle which lets the belt breathe with the wearer.

Tailored Lounge Suits Marked Down; Sports Jackets on Sale.

By John Q. Alexander.

THERE comes a time in the life of every man when he feels he might as well give up. It may be the heat, or his mother-in-law, or any vague but vicious circumstance. But mostly, we've observed, it's a feeling that the opposite sex doesn't love him; that he has no more appeal than a dish of spinach and that since he can't go the way of all flesh he doesn't want to go at all.

His plight is piteous. And we can't suggest an antidote for the heat, or for his mother-in-law. But we've got our own ideas on lure.

First, take a soft drink or something stronger. Then sally forth and cover yourself with sartorial glory. We don't say you'll be mobbed by pretties on the way home, but it does do something for your spirits to be garbed becomingly. Not even Romeo would have had the nerve to climb that balcony dressed in overalls and last year's fedora.

Handpicked Offerings.

Handpicked from current offerings because they combine good value with good taste, the following items will be becoming to nine out of ten men.

Start out by getting under cover. The 2-ounce felt hats, turned-down brim, are best for most of us, and inexpensive too. In buying headgear, remember this rule: Narrow brim for young men and short men; wider brim for older men and very tall men. We saw an amazing assortment of them yesterday—three shades of brown, three of gray and Johnson green, that dusky hue introduced in this country by Herbert Johnson, famous English hatter, are included. $5 each.

This store has many other lightweight felts, ranging from the above to an elegant affair of pure beaver. It has many special features such as a custom edge, guaranteed not to curl, and without doubt is the aristocrat in its class. It sells for $20. (Wonder what the poor are doing this year.)

Another superior item which may be had for a song (though it deserves an opera) is a cordovan leather belt, the product of master craftsmen who are trained to do with leather what the silversmith does to the ingot. Cordovan has a soft-as-satin feeling and the man who wears it less than 10 years should be turned over someone's knee and spanked—with the belt, which still will be in good condition.

Riveted Instead of Stitched.

This one has no stitching, but is riveted instead, and boasts an extraordinary buckle consisting of a flat spring, which lends elasticity to the thing and lets you breathe comfortably, following the rise and fall of your tummy as surely and lightly as a gull rides the waves. Available in plain black or brown, or shell gator, in two widths, $3 and $3.50.

Suspenders of cordovan are also to be had for $3. They are extremely good looking, and the manufacturer is so sure they'll last forever that he'll replace the elastic in the back at no cost to you whenever it wears out—it being the only thing about these braces that can wear out. Cordovan, in case you're interested, comes off the hip of man's best friend, the horse.

A well-cut, well-tailored suit is the most necessary single item in any man's wardrobe, and we've discovered that suit, ready made and reasonably priced. It is a lounge suit, boasting all the refinements and subtlety of tailoring that goes into English clothes.

Slight Touch of the Tarzan.

Features are generous shoulders and chest, slightly tapering waist and snug hips—giving you a slight touch of the Tarzan. The vest should be a trifle shorter than in most suits, and the trousers higher waisted, creating the illusion of height and long legs. Trousers should be 18 to 18½ inches wide and the cuff should not be long enough to break over the shoe.

It's a style unobtrusive and conservative, sturdily masculine and immensely flattering to most men. But those with sloping shoulders or too much weight about the hips should avoid it. Various fabrics available, all of them good, and this store goes to a lot of trouble to fit you correctly. $32 and $36, marked down during a short preseason sale from $42 and $45. Get one of these and you won't know the man in your mirror, he'll be so impressive.

Shoes, generally speaking, have no more individuality than a ham on rye. Either that, or they scream so loudly of the new and too different that no self-respecting gent would wear them to a dog fight.

But have a look at the monk-front shoe for sports wear. It's of brown bucko (sort of like buckskin), with a thick crepe rubber sole. Absolutely no break across the instep—no shoe strings, tongue, etc., just a narrow strap. Comfortable, conservative and serviceable and only $4.95. Very smart for outdoors. A nice complement would be a pair of Argyle plaid socks. These are hand-loomed in England, with bright colors in large designs. All wool, of course—$3 a pair.

Sale of Sports Jackets.

Another haberdashery has a special sale of sports jackets this week—$11.95 for any one in the house. Plenty to choose from, and there's still a lot of time to wear these. Before you buy any other look at the navy blue double-breasted jacket of light weight flannel. Navy blue is a good color for most of us, and combines well with white slacks. Wear a white pocket handkerchief and white shirt with this and you'll have achieved that uniform-appeal the ladies love.

Bow ties are back with a bang—look at the ones in regimental stripes (preferably blue and black or maroon and black) for $1.50 and the Scotch plaids for $1. They're good for street and sports wear—in fact, anything but formal wear—and lend a youthful note to your ensemble.

If you're considering an August cruise you'll need a camel's hair topcoat. They give warmth without weight and are fine for town wear, too, when the weather gets a bit cooler. There's a sale of these right now—were $50, now $40. Good in either double-breasted, full belted, polo style or single breasted, raglan shoulder type. They are informal and elegant, a difficult combination to achieve, and with care, wear indefinitely.

Mr. Alexander's articles, written exclusively for The Post, appear every Friday on this page. For information on men's fashions, or for the names of the shops carrying the apparel described above, call National 4200, branch 323. Or write, inclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

New Patterns in Ties.

London (AP).—Men's ties are patterned with a small white design of three scullers and a coxswain in a racing shell skimming across the silk. Another design is almost a treble clef. Linen ties with coarse contrasting threads woven in tweed effect are worn with sports suits.

Stabilization Of the Nerves Aid to Health

Illness Is Sure to Follow Repeated Strain on Emotions.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

AMONG our acquaintances there are some whom we classify as highly emotional, nervous, and "jumpy." We know others who are phlegmatic and calm. Although we would not term them indifferent, yet we note that it takes a powerful stimulus to arouse them to the point of enthusiasm.

Philosophers have long attempted to explain the emotions, and one of the most delightful essays of Charles Darwin is "The Expression of the Emotions in Man and Animals," in which he analyzes grief, joy, love, devotion, sulkiness, anger, helplessness, fear, blushing, etc. All nervous persons should read this classical analysis. It would help them to understand themselves.

What happens during a period of emotional excitement? Every physician is familiar with the reactions of patients who appear for an initial consultation. Some will be exceedingly apprehensive and others moderately so. Still others appear calm, but there may be an inward pentup turmoil which the discerning eye of the experienced physician can usually penetrate. These latter individuals have trained themselves to a form of control which the stethescope and the blood pressure apparatus unmask. Physicians who fail to recognize emotional factors in their patients are often misled by symptoms that are not organic; that do not in the slightest degree indicate disease.

Can we measure the effect of nervous strain and does it affect the body? A recent report by Donald P. Morris sheds considerable light upon the effects of nervousness. In studying a group of individuals it was found that the single factor of blood pressure showed an average rise of 22 millimeters as the result of moderate excitement. A few patients showed an increase of more than 30 points. The pulse rate increased on the average nearly 15 beats per minute. The most significant change, however, was in the blood sugar level. These increases varied from 20 to 149 milligrams, or from 20 to 150 per cent above normal. The case in which the greatest rise was observed was a man aged 45 who saw a relative fall from a window. He picked her up, rushed her to a hospital, "drove like mad," and was obviously profoundly upset. Another case was that of a young man aged 25 whose wife was about to be confined and who accompanied her in an ambulance to the hospital. Blood sugar showed an increase of 42 points. Another emergency department of one of our series of cases examined in the large hospitals gave similar results.

We may assume that the positive changes observed in blood pressure, pulse rate and blood sugar represent but a fraction of the adjustments demanded of the body. The entrance of large quantities of sugar into the blood from its storehouses in the liver and the muscles was brought about by hundreds of calls upon glands and other structures. The increased activity of the heart, with the added strain placed on the blood vessels, was again a complex process demanding nerve energy and increased oxidation.

Coiffures Set To Personality By Hairdresser

Connecticut Avenue Shop Does Wonders With Long, Short Locks.

By Dudley Harmon.
Pinch-Hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

WE HAVE OFTEN heard tell of these "personality" haircuts which are supposed to do glamorous things to one's charm, but we always thought they were too good to be true. That is, we thought so until the other day, when we summoned up enough courage to surrender ourselves to a Connecticut avenue hairdresser who specializes in this sort of thing.

Feeling very dubious about the whole situation, we watched him snip away. Wondering if we had not made the mistake of our lives, we anxiously watched his deft fingers shape and twist the strands into curls and undulations. For a half hour we agonized under the dryer, thoroughly convinced that whatever slight "charm" we had ever possessed was being completely done away with.

We discovered how foolish had been our fears the minute the dryer was removed and our hair combed out. One glance at the mirror, and we knew that this was absolutely the most exciting thing that had happened to us in a long time. We won't go into details for fear of sounding conceited, but suffice it to say that never before had we realized how great a difference cleverly arranged hair could make in a person's appearance.

Wizard With One's Locks.

This Connecticut avenue man is a wizard. He can think up the most ingenious things to do with your locks. He studies your face from every angle, picking out the features to emphasize, and frowning at the bad spots, which he attempts to minimize. If your forehead is too high, he'll carefully comb the hair down to equalize it. If you have a long, hooked nose, he sees to it that the appearance of your nose is shortened to some extent by the use of unbroken lines in your coiffure. He slenderizes wide, chubby faces by hair lines which swing upward.

When we talked with this clever monsieur, we found him very much excited about the new hair styles which all of us who wish to be smart are going to adopt this winter. The hats fresh from Paris indicate that emphasis this year is going to be focused on the face, especially on the forehead. Halo hats, baby bonnets, and similar styles leave the hair well in view. Hence, he has thought of many clever ways to bring the hair around in little curls and bangs up front. Last year, the style was over and up across the back, but this season he swings it over and up with soft curls complimenting the face.

Stunning Costume Clips.

A FAMOUS French house put them out, these stunning clips we saw in a local department store the other day. The last word in chic costume jewelry, they spell Paris with a capital "P." They are made of a new material called calalin, which has been prominently featured in fashion forecasts for some time. The clips are designed in animal shape, and come in sets of twins. Tortoises, horseheads, elephants and frogs are some we saw. Colors are blue black, prystal (a composition which looks like crystal) and white. They cost only $1 a pair. The twin sets should do a lot to freshen up your costumes.

Dresses Long Hair Smartly.

Our monsieur is one of few who can achieve smart effects with long hair. Lovely as lengthly tresses are, they sometimes have a tendency to look dowdy unless properly arranged. This man can cross the hair in back to make it follow the outline of the head, and can achieve the same soft, flattering effects around the face as with short hair.

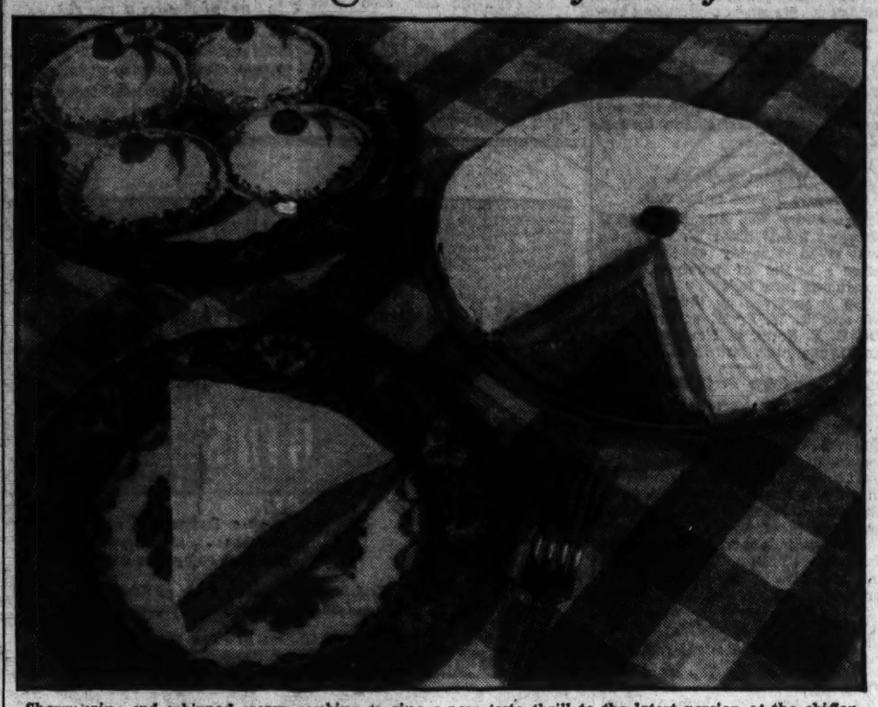
So get to work on your hair. Let this artist—for he really is an artist—decide what to do with your face. You'll be amazed at the difference it will make in your whole personality. Furthermore, unlike most careful coiffures, these are perfectly easy to keep looking neat.

Soap-Sachet Box.

GOOD THINGS seem to come in twos this year. In a local department store is a box containing a soap and a sachet, both of which are put out by a French house widely known for the excellence of its products. The soap is a concoction of pure vegetable oils plus a specially blended perfume. It does great things in the way of cleansing and softening the skin, and leaves your face delightfully scented afterward. The sachet plays a dual role in that it can be used on your clothes or on you with equally good effect. It comes in a powder form, just right to sprinkle in with your lingerie, or to use on your face or body. It is particularly nice patted on the shoulders when one sallies forth in evening dress. Powder and soap cost only $1 for the box.

Call Dudley Harmon, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Sherry Wine Chiffon Pie Has Flavor That's Nothing Short of Perfection



Sherry wine and whipped cream combine to give a new taste thrill to the latest version of the chiffon pie. Because it is rich, the pie will find its best place after a light meal.

Red Coloring Will Add Attractive Touch to Its Color.

By Dorothea Duncan.

A NEW VERSION in pie, a new taste thrill—that is the only way to describe this sherry wine chiffon pie. Once tasted and your family's favorite pie will go down in defeat. Whipped cream and sherry wine impart a flavor that is nothing short of perfection. Try it this week-end, for Saturday dinner, perhaps, especially if you are having a light meal, for the pie is rich and heavy foods preceding this type of dessert will detract from the spell that it is certain to cast over everyone who indulges.

Sherry Wine Chiffon Pie.

1 cup milk
½ cup sugar
3 egg yolks
3 egg whites
½ cup domestic sherry wine
¼ teaspoon salt
Pinch grated nutmeg
1 cup whipped cream
1 tablespoon gelatine soaked in 4 tablespoons cold milk

Combine the milk and sugar and heat to the boiling point. Place in a double boiler, add the well beaten egg yolks, nutmeg and salt. Stir constantly. Add the wine slowly and the gelatine that has been soaked. Cook this mixture in the double boiler until it coats a spoon. Cool slightly and fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Let cool until firm and blend with the whipped cream.

If you wish to add an attractive touch to the color of the pie, divide the filling in two parts and add a few drops of red coloring to one half. Make the first layer in a baked pie shell of the plain cream filling, on top the tinted layer. Cover with sweetened whipped cream and chill again before serving.

Toast topped with melted cheese makes an attractive breakfast dish to serve when eggs have become monotonous. Toast the bread on one side. Spread untoasted side with softened butter and add a liberal amount of mild American cheese. Tuck toast, cheese side up, under the broiled and remove when the cheese has melted. Best served when still hot.

Frozen Fruit Salad.

1 pint cream
1 teaspoon powdered sugar
1½ cups cut up fruit (fresh canned or candied cherries, peaches, pineapple, etc.)
¾ cup mayonnaise
1 teaspoon granulated gelatine
Lettuce
2 tablespoons cold water

Soak the gelatine in cold water, melt it over steam, and beat it into the mayonnaise. Add the sugar to the cream and whip it, then combine with the mayonnaise. Stir in the cut-up fruit. Pack and freeze in a mold packed in equal parts of ice and salt or freeze for four hours in the trays of a mechanical refrigerator. The mayonnaise may be omitted and served separately.

For culinary assistance, call Dorothea Duncan, National 4200, or write to her, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, in care of The Washington Post.

Blankets Kept at Hand By Shelves in Closets

With the gradual change of climatic conditions, the problem of storing some blankets and having others accessible for use when needed faces every housewife. When modernizing the home it is an excellent idea to provide storage cupboards, or closets, containing shelves for the storage of surplus blankets and a sliding rack in each on which may me hung one or more blankets where they will be quickly available for use on cool nights.

Rocking Chair Singing Held Fine for Baby

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

IT IS SO GENERALLY considered poor policy to rock and sing a child to sleep, that it has come to be considered a mistake to rock and sing to children at all. As a result, mothers and babies have lost one of the rare and beautiful experiences of life.

For a child to depend on rocking and singing every time he goes to sleep or wants comfort is bad training. He should automatically go to sleep when he is laid down and expect no further attention from anyone. If he cries, well and good; he should be allowed to cry until he learns his lesson.

The time for rocking and singing has nothing to do with sleep or soothing. It should be one of the regular features of the well-ordered day, like taking a walk or a nap, or romping or bathing. The rocking is often merely incidental. The singing is the important part of the program.

The baby who has been sung to regularly is pretty sure later on to be able to carry a tune. The songs sink into his inner consciousness before he can register the sounds, and at an amazingly early age he will sing them himself. The rocking, if done in time to the singing, will develop early a sense of rhythm, which again will be so much a part of him, that he never will know where he got it or how.

Until he is two or three, this simple music will be enough to lay foundations for the future. Later, when the child wants to join the singing, it is time to give up the rocking chair technique and take to the piano and a larger range of choice in compositions.

Music learned this way on his mother's knee, strengthens the bond between mother and child by the memory of emotional expression shared. The early rocking chair songs should be a delightful experience for both.

Bank Women Set Convention in Fall

Sturgis, of Boston, president of the association. Miss Sturgis is assistant branch manager of the First National Bank of Boston.

Members of the association in Washington and vicinity are Miss Alice Whitton, assistant to the trust officer of the First National Bank of Alexandria and a member of the program committee for the convention; Mrs. Vera W. Rhine, auditor and assistant secretary of the Morris Plan Bank of Washington, and Miss S. Winifred Burwell, assistant trust officer of the National Metropolitan Bank and a member of the general convention committee.

Approximately 3,000 women bank officers in the United States are eligible for membership in the association, which was organized in 1921 in New York. The association held its annual convention last year in Washington. Miss Burwell was general chairman of the event.

CULBERTSON on BRIDGE

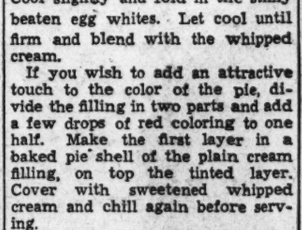
THE GRAND COUP.

Most examples of the grand coup, that sensational type of hand in which declarer must trump his own winning tricks, take place when the contract is a grand slam or a small slam. Some of the most beautiful hands which involve the grand coup are those in which only a part-score or a game is at stake. The following deal is particularly interesting because the declarer could recognize the necessity for a grand coup, even before he started to play the hand.

South, dealer.



The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1♡(1)	Pass	2NT(2)	Pass
3♡(3)	Pass	3NT	Pass
4♡	Pass	Pass	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—A minimum bid with 2½ bare honor-tricks and a rebiddable suit.
2—North chooses two notrump rather than his alternative response of two clubs because his hand is the ideal type to play in a notrump game.
3—With a meager supply of honors and a six-card major suit, South is unwilling to risk a notrump contract.

The Play.

West opened the four of diamonds and South immediately saw from the profusion of high cards in his hand and dummy that East must have the Ace of diamonds and the three missing heart honors. Without extreme care he would lose these four tricks. The first play from dummy was the diamond ten and when East played the Ace, South dropped the King. He needed to save as many entries to dummy as possible. East returned a diamond and dummy was in with the Queen. On the nine of hearts, it was dummy's first lead, East played the King. Now, too wise to continue diamonds and give South a free opportunity to ruff, East led back a club. This was won by dummy's Queen and another heart led, on which East played the Ace. East had the guarded Jack of hearts and South without a trump left in dummy could not pick up this honor unless he could shorten himself to a holding of exactly two hearts in the last two cards. His problem, therefore, was to find opportunities to reduce his heart length by ruffing.

After winning the King of clubs, dummy led a diamond and South ruffed. One of his surplus hearts was now gone. His next play was a club to the King and another diamond was led and ruffed. On this East discarded a spade. South now only had two hearts, the Queen and ten. South's next two plays were a low spade to the Jack and then the Ace of spades, under which South dropped the King. When Dummy's Queen of spades was now led, East had to follow and South discarded the Ace of clubs. At this point dummy was in the lead. East had two hearts and South had two hearts. Dummy led a low club, East ruffed and South overruffed. South's last heart was higher than East's and won the final trick, giving South the contract.

Women Inept In Insect War, Tests Reveal

Six of 90 Make Perfect Score in Killing Pests With Sprayer.

ONLY 6 out of90 women achieved a perfect score in ridding a room of flies in a series of tests conducted in New York City by Dr. Alfred Weed, prominent entomologist. All women participating in the tests are considered of average, or above, intelligence.

Nearly one-third of the women taking the test attempted to chase the flies individually. Although such procedure may be practical when only a few insects are in a room, it becomes too long a task for the time allowed by the test. The majority of women failed to spray sufficient mist to penetrate the room thoroughly. The room contained approximately 1,000 cubic feet of space, the size of an average room.

Several women failed to knock down a single fly.

"These practical tests demonstrate clearly that a surprisingly large number of housewives do not know how to combat household pests successfully, despite the fact that there are a great variety of reliable sprays, liquids and powdered insecticides available that are very effective when properly used," Dr. Weed commented.

"To destroy flying insects, as mosquitos, gnats or flies, the doors and windows should be closed and the mist from the sprayer should be directed obliquely toward the ceiling. A blast or two beneath pieces of furniture will dislodge lurking mosquitos. The room should be filled with mist and left closed for 10 or 20 minutes, after which the dead and stunned insects that have dropped to the floor should be swept up and destroyed.

Hikers Offered Choice of Two Trips Sunday

Cupid's Bower Island and Rock Run Destinations of Wanderbirds.

By Robert Shosteck.

Scenic Great Falls and the Potomac Valley again beckon the Wanderbird Hikers for Sunday's two trips—one along the Billygoat trail to Cupid's Bower Island, and another from the falls to Rock Run, past the old gold mine on Conduit road. Both trips include swimming and the trails are unusually interesting with springs at convenient points.

Dr. H. N. Stokes will lead the 6-mile hike (No. 1) and Dr. Titus Ulke and B. F. Rogers will lead the 3-mile (No. 2) trip to Cupid's Bower and Cropley. Readers of The Washington Post and club members planning to go on either trip will meet in front of The Post Building at 9:45 a. m. The round-trip bus fare will be 40 cents and reservations must be made in advance at National 4200. Tickets should be purchased in advance at the counter in The Post Building to avoid unnecessary delay in starting. Bring along a swim suit, lunch and a cup for water. The group should return by 7 p. m. or earlier.

Route of Longer Hike.

The longer hike starts from the Lock Tavern, at Great Falls, Md., the route following the trail along the north side of the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal for a short distance. Not far from the spring at Lock 16 we turn up an old wood road, and come out on Conduit road near the schoolhouse. We follow a dirt road and trail for half a mile to a large gold mining establishment, abandoned several decades ago. The trackage, boilers and hoisting machinery are still in place, and one can find an interesting variety of minerals on the old mine heap. From here we follow the route as indicated on the map, the trail through this region being open and usually along old woodland roads.

About two miles from the mine we cross St. Gabriel's Church road and descend into Rock Run valley. The group continues along the rocky gorge of this stream for a half-mile, crossing the stream several times and keeping to country roads on the bluff to avoid the bad trails along the lower reaches of Rock Run. The trail descends to the bank of the stream a short distance from Conduit road, close to the pool in which the group will swim. The pool is small and entirely unsuited for a natatorial marathon, but the cold water, to be found only in these spring-fed streams, is quite bracing and refreshing. Conduit road is about five minutes' walk downstream.

Trip 2 Follows Palisades.

Those hikers interested in the shorter though somewhat rockier trip will cross the footbridge at Lock 20, opposite the Lock Tavern, and follow the cowpath for a half-mile to Lock 16, from which point the trail to the upper part of Bear Island begins. The path follows the palisades of the Potomac to the old river channel, now dry and boulder-strewn. Some of the giant pot-holes to be seen here have a diameter of 15 feet. Here and there on Bear Island one may find in dry and rocky places, patches of prickly-pear cactus, an attractive species with large, flat, reclining slabs.

The hikers cross over to Cupid's Bower on the rocks which choke the old channel, and make their way through the very rocky terrain to the south side of the island. Here in a quiet cove is an excellent swimming place with a sandy bottom. After the swim we will recross and follow the trail to Cropley, a distance of a half-mile. The main trail on Bear Island is blue blazed and if hikers will use these blazes as guides there should be no fear of being lost. Hikers are urged to keep close to the leader on either trip, since it is easy to stray from the trail. On hike No. 2 we will find no water between Lock 16 and the Angler's Club house at Cropley. The buses will await the hikers at Cropley and then proceed to pick up the others at the Rock Run bridge, three miles up Conduit road.

The Federal Diary

By Loren Hall,
Batting for Morgan Baker.

PASSAGE of the annual and sick leave bills yesterday afternoon by the House brought cheer to thousands of Government employes who have been anxiously waiting for action by that body.

Actively pushing a movement designed to better salary and working conditions of employes, the Employes Association, Immigration and Naturalization Service, Ellis Island, New York, is urging the passage of a law providing for the reclassification of Federal employes in the field service.

Excerpts from resolutions passed by that body follow:

"That we favor the enactment of a law providing for the reclassification of Federal employes in the field service, similar to the law in effect in the District of Columbia, and that we will co-operate with other interested organizations in securing the early enactment of such law.

"That, pending such reclassification of the field service, we favor and will seek to bring about a readjustment of salary schedules with automatic promotions, insofar as it affects our membership, either through departmental action or through congressional appeal."

Opposes "Poor and Broke."

Taking issue with "Poor and Broke, but a Loyal American," Anon resorts to the medium of poetry:

"Dear 'Poor and Broke:'

"I read your letter Saturday,
And while I do not quite agree,
At least I am constrained to say
I envy your serenity.

"One rarely hears such gratitude
Expressed for things just as they are—
That pay day comes with certitude,
And salary checks stretch fairly far.

"Yet you forget, it seems to me,
That neither progress nor content
Can come from a philosophy
Which stifles efforts onward bent.

"And don't you think that Uncle Sam
In business ways should take the lead,
Not say, 'I'm all right as I am,'
But set new standards—supersede?

"At this time when we've worked so hard
On those bills granting leave for rest,
Such sentiments as yours retard
Us from the goal toward which we've pressed.

British Need Opens a New Apple Mart

Maryland Growers Profit by Failure of Crop in England.

Early Variety Bringing $1.25 a Bu.; Barrel Demand High.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hancock, Md., Aug. 8.—An almost complete failure of the English apple crop has opened an export market for Western Maryland growers that gives promise of one of the best selling seasons in years.

Already hundreds of bushels of Duchess variety have moved out of New York and Baltimore from this section for England and growers anticipate a steady export market in that country, orders for summer Rainbows, Maiden's Blush, Wealthies and Northwestern Greenings already have been received for shipment during the next month.

England consumes about 3,000,000 barrels of apples annually, which is about one-tenth the normal U. S. production.

Greens Ordered for First Time.

For the first time, England, which has only purchased apples with color, will accept green-colored apples and exporters have already placed large orders for Grimes Golden.

Growers here are receiving 70 cents a bushel guaranty, paid at the packing shed, and all that the apples command when sold over shipping charges. On the early variety, they have been receiving this week as high as $1.25 a bushel, the apples selling in England for $1.85 per bushel.

For the first time in some years, England is asking for apples in barrels. Heretofore, all export business has been in baskets. This will mean a big boos for the cooperage industry. Already the demand for barrels is taxing facilities of makers.

Will Stabilize Home Mart.

The export demand, growers say, will also do much in stabilizing the domestic market, taking off the usual excess.

The apples in this section are of unusually fine grade. They have suffered little from scab and insects, which have done consideratble damage elsewhere.

France, too, is accepting more apples this year from the United States, according to growers.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 8.—Indications are that Albemarle County can expect bumper peach and apple crops this year. J. M. Rothwell estimated that the two crops combined ought to bring nearly $2,000,000 to the county.

Speaking before the local Rotary Club last night, Charles T. O'Neill, of Crozet, orchardist and banker, predicted that some 200,000 bushels of peaches would be shipped from that section, and said the growers should realize close to $500,000. The crop of Albmarle peaches, he stated, should exceed that in the Timberville section of Rockingham County, which usually leads the State. The severe freeze in the valley last spring served to cut down the crop there about 12 to 15 per cent of normal.

Arthur M. Gable, of Covesville, in the heart of the Albemarle Pippin belt, told of the outlook for the apple crop this season. The yield this year, he stated, should be the best in five years, and the growers should realize $1,500,000.

Gable advocated a selling agency to handle the fruit after it is packed, similar to those in the Northwest.

The bumper crop might be expected to send the price of apples way down, said Mr. Gable, but apparently this will not be the case this year. There is a heavy export demand for apples, it is reported, and the domestic demand is apparently ample to take up the remainder.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Aug. 8.— So successful was the tour of the Franklin County fruit growers to Adams County that it was decided to make the tour an annual event. Orchards visited included those of H. S. Stoner, G. M. Bucher and, C. J. Tyson. J. H. Knode, farm agent for Franklin County, was in charge of the tour.

B. & A. R. Seeks Permit to Run The Short Line

Bondholders Ask Permit to Operate; Bus Route Also Proposed.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 8.—The Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad, a new company formed by the bondholders of the old Short Line of the W. B. & A. today asked the Public Service Commission for permission to operate the Short Line between Annapolis and Baltimore.

The Red Star bus line also filed application today for permission to run buses to Annapolis. Hearings on the two applications were set for August 14.

Operation of the electric line under the receiver appointed for the old Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad Co. will cease on August 20, under a Federal court order.

The railroad, in its application, proposes to operate over the North Shore tracks between Shipley and Gwynn's Falls. A new track will be built from Gwynn's Falls 1,100 feet to connect with the Baltimore & Ohio near Putnam street in Baltimore.

The B. & O. has agreed to electrify 1¾ miles of its track into the Camden Station. The Baltimore & Annapolis cars will use this terminus for a payment to the B. & O. of one-third of the net income of the new company.

Lease of the terminal is for 25 years.

The Baltimore and Annapolis says that it has obtained $250,000 to improve the bridges in Annapolis and to buy the track between Gwynn's Falls and Shipley. The railroad also may buy the tracks of the old South Shore division between Annapolis and Crownsville.

The Red Star Line made application for permission to serve all points which will lose transportation service when the old Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Line ceases to operate. While it does not specifically ask for permission to serve the South Shore Line of the old W. B. & A., the application would cover that territory.

The bus line asks an immediate hearing on the application so that it may buy additional equipment to take up the service when the railroad ceases.

Norfolk Man Slays Wife, Shoots Self

Husband Locks Bathroom Door Before Firing Pistol.

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 8.—Victor C. Griffin, 39, shot and killed his 32-year-old wife, Mrs. Thelma V. Griffin, and then turned the pistol on himself, inflicting a chest wound, in their home early today as the couple's young son and daughter crouched terrified in their bedroom.

Griffin, said to have been drinking, locked his wife and himself in a bathroom on the second floor of the house before firing the shots. The shooting occurred a few minutes after midnight.

Attracted by the shots, neighbors forced their way into the bathroom and found the body of Mrs. Griffin, clad in a nightgown and shot through the heart, on the floor. Partly across her body was Griffin, in pajamas, a bullet wound in the chest and a pistol in his hand.

Edward Lee Griffin, 14, and Jane Virginia Griffin, 10, children of the couple, said their father became angry with their mother because she was playing cards downstairs with her niece, Edna Lee Griffin, 16.

Griffin in bed, called downstairs to his wife to be quiet, Mrs. Griffin went upstairs to the bedroom and an altercation followed. As Mrs. Griffin returned to the first floor several minutes later, declaring she was going to telephone police, Griffin called out, "Do you want me to shoot you first?"

Mrs. Griffin did not call police and shortly afterward went upstairs again and entered the bathroom. Griffin got out of bed, walked to the bathroom and locked the door. The couple's son heard his mother exclaim: "My God, let go of my arm. You're hurting me."

Griffin then asked his wife three times: "Do you want me to shoot you?" Mrs. Griffin did not answer. A moment later one shot and then another rang out, followed by silence in the bathroom.

Paralyzed by terror, the children were still in their bedroom when neighbors arrived and broke down the bathroom door.

Hospital attaches today said Griffin's condition was critical.

Banker Asks Court to Halt Fraud Trial

Claims Judge Who Aided in Decision Had Sat in Previous Case.

Former Head of Defunct Trust Company Files Appeal Motion.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Aug. 8.—Attorneys for Emory L. Coblentz, former president of the defunct Central Trust Co. of Maryland, today filed a motion in the court of appeals asking the court to vacate its opinion requiring that Coblentz must stand trial on a charge of fraudulent corporate misrepresentation.

The motion contends that Judge D. Lindley Sloan, who wrote the court's opinion, was not qualified to sit on the case, since he had sat in a previous case growing out of the failure of the trust company.

Leonard Weinberg, attorney for Coblentz, cited in the motion section 15 of article 4 of the State constitution that "the judge who heard the cause below shall not participate in the decision." Weinberg also quoted from a decision of the Supreme Court that "a judge who has once heard the case upon its merits in the court of first instance is certainly disqualified from sitting in the Circuit Court of Appeals in the hearing and decision of any question, in the same case, which involves in any degree matter upon which he had occasion to pass in the lower court."

Judges Hammond Urner and F. Neal Parke did not sit on the appeal in the decision in question and Judge W. Mason Shehan was absent when the case was argued. The motion filed today cited that Judges Sloan, Urner and Parke, in their capacity as chief judges of circuit courts, had sat in various phases of litigation against Coblentz.

The decision in question was handed down July 12. It reversed a decision of the Baltimore Criminal Court which had upheld a plea of "res adjudicata," based on the fact that Coblentz had been acquitted in Frederick County Court on another charge growing out of the bank failure.

4 Firemen Burned In $75,000 Blaze

By the Associated Press.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 8.—Capt. William Willis and three other firemen were recovering today from burns received when they fought a $75,000 blaze that destroyed the Natural Mills flour mill near Bridgewater last night. Another fireman was ducked as he tried to remove a hose section from the mill race.

The mill, built in 1874, contained 8,000 bushels of wheat, 250 barrels of flour and 50 tons of feed. The fire origin of which has not been determined, was the largest in Rockingham County in a decade.

Fifty men pulled a county fire truck to safety from beside the walls just before the structure collapsed. A bucket brigade of volunteer firemen saved three nearby residences.

New State Policemen Start School Visits

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 8.—The new State police department is training them young and has started a program of visiting the schools to talk to the children in order to gain their confidence and fellowship, Capt. William McKay Johnson, of the State police, told the Hagerstown Rotary Club yesterday.

Capt. Johnson said the new night patrol of highways by members of his department was having its effect in keeping reckless drivers off the highways.

"The average motorist is law-abiding," said Capt. Johnson.

Peery Asked to Act in Drop Of Tobacco Trade With China

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 8.—Gov. Peery today had before him an assertion that it was the "privilege and duty of Virginia" to lead a movement to recover a loss in tobacco shipments to China which was traced directly to the silver purchases act of the United States.

In a letter to the Governor, William Holmes Davis, on behalf of the legislative committee of the Tobacco Association of the United States cited figures showing an average export of 1,416,000 pounds monthly for the first five months of 1935, as compared with an average of 5,840,000 for the same period of 1934.

The silver purchases act was described by Davis as having "a disastrous effect on business in China," as well as having created ill will toward America in that country.

As American exports have declined, the tobacco spokesman said production of the weed has increased in China.

The appeal directed attention to a decrease in shipments to Great Britain, ranking first as a buyer of American tobacco, with China second, which was ascribed to policies of the British government.

A reply is expected to be forwarded to Davis as soon as the Governor has time to give the matter some study.

Secret OF HEALTH:

A Balanced Meal

One of the least known yet most important elements of health is the balanced meal. A meal containing the necessary vitamins will supply you with pep and proper resistance against sickness. Moreover, the balanced meal is not fattening. It is a builder of strong, sparkling teeth as well as a strong, healthy body. Essentially the balanced meal contains milk, a portion of meat, fowl, egg or fish, one vegetable that grows above the ground, one vegetable that grows below the ground, a serving of fruit and some butter.

The groups were divided into six tribes each. Beatrice S. Cissel, of Howard County, was chosen leader of the Algonquin Nation and Lee Howes, of Montgomery County, was chosen to head the Iroquois Nation.

Speakers at this morning's assembly will include H. C. Byrd, acting president of the University; Dr. Thomas B. Symons, director of the extension service of the university, and Lee Warfield, a club member from Howard County.

Today there will also be a "clothing judging contest," in which clothes, made by the girl club members, will be awarded prizes and certificates of merit. Similar contests will be held for canned goods and house furnishings.

There will be poultry and dairy judging contests and demonstrations of garden and forestry work for the boys. Meetings of the clubs' "All Stars" and of tribal leaders will be held during the day.

County to Ask That State Aid School Budget

Berkeley Estimates Lower, But Drop in Revenue Forces Action.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 8.—Berkeley County will ask for State secondary school aid to meet its minimum salary and maintenance requirements this year, it was announced today by the school board after it had made its estimate for the coming year.

As drawn by Superintendent G. William Ropp and tentatively approved by the board, the 1935-36 budget calls for expenditures slightly under the figure for 1934-35. An estimated $235,000 for teachers' salaries and $75,000 for maintenance was approved by the board. During the last school session $247,000 was set aside for teachers' salaries and approximately $74,000 for maintenance.

The maximum levy will prevail again, but because of the decrease in the county valuation, will yield about $3,000 less than in 1934-35. For all districts except Martinsburg and Hedgesville, the levies will be, in cents per $100 assessed valuation: Class 1, 15.85; Class 2, 32.8; Class 3, 66.5, and Class 4, 66.5.

Martinsburg district, by reason of its school bonds, will have this assessment, plus a total of 10 cents for Class 1 property; 20 cents for Class 2 property, and 40 cents for Classes 3 and 4.

Hedgesville will have a lighter bond assessment, Class 1 taking 6 additional cents; Class 2 taking 12 cents, and Classes 3 and 4 taking 24 additional cents.

State Weighs School Delay For Paralysis

Decision Put Off in Hope Epidemic May Decline by Next Month.

10 of 14 New Cases in Albemarle County; 2 in Richmond.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 8.—State school officials today were considering the possibility of delaying the opening of Virginia's public schools in September because of the prevalence of infantile paralysis.

Dr. Sidney B. Hall, superintendent of public instruction, said a decision was not necessary at this time, adding that he hoped the disease would be on the decline by next month.

An official of the public health department, asked if health authorities would find it necessary to advise a delay in school openings, said "we hope not."

Albemare County and Charlottesville still suffered the heaviest attack today, as 10 of the 14 new cases reported were centered there. Six were in the county and four in the city. Others were from Richmond City, 2; Alleghany, 1, and Isle of Wight, 1. The latter was the first case reported there.

Since June 1 403 cases have been recorded in the State, 105 of them since August 1.

Because of the spread of poliomyelitis, a celebration at Kilmarnock planned for August 14 in commemoration of Henrietta Hall Shuch, first woman missionary to China, has been postponed, Baptist mission officials announced today.

Several hundred Baptists were planning to participate in observance of the centennial of the work Mrs. Shuck began in the Orient in 1835.

Services Called Off By Hartwood Church.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 8.—Falling in line with other churches in Stafford County, Hartwood Presbyterian Church has postponed all church and Sunday school services temporarily because of the epidemic of infantile paralysis. So far there have been no cases reported in Stafford or this immediate vicinity.

Warrenton Horse Show Is Delayed by Epidemic

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., Aug. 8.—At a meeting of the Warrenton Horse Show Association in Warrenton this morning, it was decided to postpone the horse show from September 2 and 3 to October 11 and 12 because of the presence of infantile paralysis in neighboring counties.

Margaret—I won't be able to see you for lunch today. I am going to automobile row to look at a 1931 Auburn advertised in the classified section this morning for only $295.

"Jalna," Opening Yesterday on Keith's Screen, Is a Film Play of Sturdy Worth

Is True Study Of Hectic Life On Old Estate

Cast Is Uniformly Capable; About 'March of Time'; Theater Notes.

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"JALNA." RKO-Radio picturization of the novel by Mazo de la Roche, with screen play by Anthony Veiller, adapted to the screen by Garrett Fort and Larry Bachmann, featuring Kay Johnson, Ian Hunter, David Manners, Nigel Bruce, Peggy Wood, and Molly Le Mont, with Jessie Ralph, C. Aubrey Smith, Halliwell Hobbes, Theodore Newton, and Master Clifford Severn. Directed by John Cromwell. Reviewed Wednesday afternoon.

"Jalna" is an excellent picture.

While certain aspects of the story of the inherited and romantic traits of the Whiteoaks family, who have occupied the ancestral acres of Jalna, in southern Ontario, for generations on end, may be slightly repugnant to those, for example, who resent the neuroses with which Eugene O'Neill imbues his more morbid characters, the case history of a household involved in bickerings, conflicting ambitions and twisted loves is so naturally, so comprehensively and so authentically set forth that a consciousness of sound and substantial drama is indelibly imprinted upon the memory of the thoughtful playgoer.

"Jalna" is essentially a drama of the interplay of jarring personalities. There are the centenarian duenna of the establishment, who celebrates her hundredth birthday during the progress of the play; her two elderly and complacent sons, who serve merely as balance wheels in a domestic machine that is constantly being thrown out of gear by a daughter disappointed in love 20 years before; a younger son who is a minor poet with delusions of grandeur; another son who has the temerity to marry the questionable "daughter" of the man who jilted his sister; the son who acts as manager of the estate and falls in love with the poet's bride, a weakling tattle-tale whose meddling has tragic results, and a juvenile member of the family eternally bent on mischief of a sort not always innocent.

Dramatic Elements All Present.

Here, condensed into a direct and straight-moving narrative, are elements of conflict that must result in climaxes that strike fire, even if only passably portrayed. Fortunately, however, the pivotal roles in "Jalna" are far better than passably played, despite the fact that the cast embraces no name of overwhelming box office importance.

Among the principals there can not be recalled an instance of overemphasis or resort to the artificialities of conscious "acting." There is about the picture that sturdy worth that generally results from a concert of conscientious effort rather than from any single inspired feat of acting, direction or photography.

The thing just rings true and that is all there is to it. Why it does is beside the point.

It is a down-to-earth story told in simple and straightforward terms. It is acted both in shirt sleeves and overalls and dinner jackets and black ties, depending upon whether it is planting or harvest time at Jalna, or Christmas, with the singing of carols and the sipping of piping punches.

As between these two extremes of dress and treatment there is no variation in the fidelity of the players to their characters or the convincing quality of their unfolding of a story that takes the poet egotist off in a moment of panic, enables his bride to find her true love in the older brother and reunites the mooning sister and bibulous neighbor who have been separated for two decades by one of those mythical barriers that are purely emotional and mental.

Is Faithful to Type.

The working out of a complex story involving many interests and many points of view has been accomplished with that rare skill that has preserved the complete illusion of a proud and distinguished family engaged in the serious business of fulfilling its destiny, enduring its inevitable tragedies and reveling in its petty glories and seemingly prodigious personal triumphs.

"Jalna" thus has body, substance and authenticity, whether all of its characters are paragons of all the virtues or not.

The outstanding performance of the cast is contributed to a fine gallery of expertly limned portraitures by Jessie Ralph in the role of Gran, the grande dame of the house, who has lived out a century. Miss Ralph is petulant, humorous, not above a drink or an oath, on occasion, and, in her finer moments, dominant and regal. A few more performances like her Peggotty in "David Copperfield," her acrid dowager in "One More Spring" and this, and Miss Ralph will find herself in the forefront of the cinema's character actresses if she is not, indeed, there already.

Other fine characterizations are offered by Nigel Bruce, as the self-confessed village reprobate; Kay Johnson, as the poet's bride, and David Manners, as the overstuffed rhymester; Ian Hunter, as head of the house; Peggy Wood, as Mr. Bruce's pining love; Theodore Newton, as a younger son with a mind of his own, and Master Clifford Severn, who approaches within easy reach of the precocity in pronunciation and perfection of diction of a Freddie Bartholomew.

Support and Supplementaries.

C. Aubrey Smith and Halliwell Hobbes, without a great deal to do to tax their resourcefulness and skill, do it extremely well. Like Miss Ralph's recent work, Nigel Bruce's appearances in "Becky Sharp," "She" and "Jalna" have served to stamp him as an actor of extraordinary versatility and finish. His services, like hers, should be greatly in demand from now on.

That exquisite bit of natural-color fantasy, "Water Babies," one of Walt Disney's more imaginative Silly Symphonies; the Pathe News, in which Postmaster General Farley sounds off for the re-election of President Roosevelt; "A Night at the Biltmore Bowl," featuring Jimmie Greer and His Orchestra and a large number of screen luminaries, and the issue of "Screen Snapshots" included in last week's bill, augment a feature that almost achieves the unusual camera feat of supplanting realism with reality.

Those famished and expectant occupants of the drama desks who were looking forward to a Variety Club "breakfast" to Phil Spitalny and his "board of governors" this noon are doomed to disappointment. Maestro Spitalny late yesterday wired Mr. Barney McDevitt, his local mouthpiece, for the time being, that, owing to rehearsals of new routines being held in New York, it will be impossible for him and his "Hour of Charm" girls to reach the Capital earlier than 8 o'clock tonight. He said nothing about a midnight snack, so the assumption is that we will have to go out and buy our own, or go without. It's a tough life, my masters!

"March of Time" Moves.

Owing to a realignment of distribution and booking commitments, "The March of Time," one of the most discussed short subjects that have come to the screen in years, hereafter will be released through the film exchange of the RKO-Radio Pictures organization and, as a result, will be presented on the screen of the RKO-Keith Theater in this city henceforth, beginning on Wednesday, August 14.

On this date "The March of Time" will be presented on Fifteenth street as the foremost auxiliary of the bill that will have Robert Donat in "Thirty-nine Steps" as its major screen feature. This is the first starring vehicle in which Donat will have been seen since his memorable appearance in "The Count of Monte Cristo" a year ago. In the audible version of "Monte Cristo" he played the role impersonated John Gilbert in the earlier Fox silent version of the James O'Neill classic.

Four issues of "The March of Time" already have been shown on Capital screens. It is the fifth issue that will be revealed at Keith's on the 14th, as one step in the campaign to give this sterling feature a wider national distribution than it has had heretofore.

Manager Hardie Meakin is wearing a smile that spreads from 'ere to 'ere, which is quite a spread.

A foretaste of the Roadside Theater's next production, "Murder in the Red Barn," will be given the local Kiwanis Club at its luncheon today in the Mayflower Hotel garden. Two scenes from the melodrama will be given, one of them the famous prison scene in which Eugene Kressin, Janet Coon and William Phillips will portray the roles in which they will be seen at the Roadside next week, beginning Monday night. To add further variety to the program Mr. Kressin and Miss Coon will sing their celebrated entr'acte song from "After Dark," the old Marie Dressler hit, "Heaven Will Protect the Working Girl." This will be the second "invitation performance" of the duet. Earlier in the summer it was part of an entertainment given by the Washington newspaper correspondents, also at the Mayflower.

In-Off-the-Limb Note.

Following my new and hazardous system of picking the winners in all important athletic events, I set it down as my guess this morning that Joe Louis will win over King Levinsky in Chicago by a technical knockout in the first round.

Follow this column's selections and wear diamond drills and handcuffs!

Brings "Charm Hour" to the Earle

When the bill for the new week is inaugurated at the Earle Theater tomorrow, the headline attraction on the stage will be supplied by Phil Spitalny and his all-woman "Hour of Charm" orchestra, familiar to radio tuners-in as well as theater audiences. Maestro Spitalny, pictured above, is one of the contemporary stage's most musicianly conductors and in his present band of 32 female instrumentalists has the finest organization of its kind in the country. Spitalny's musical arrangements are of such richness that less than 32 instruments can not interpret them satisfactorily.

"Going Native" Features Week Of Amusement

Theater and Park Bills Offer 'Names' and Innovations.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

For the third successive year, Loew's Fox Theater, beginning tomorrow, will present as its stage attraction the all-Washington "Going Native" revue, with a cast and chorus recruited in their entirety from the ranks of entertainers resident in the Capital. Instead of one master of ceremonies, as heretofore, this year's production will boast three in the persons of Horace Hunnicutt, Arthur Reilly and Polly Palmer. The cast embraces a number of specialists of varied talents and the chorus is made up of 18 beautiful and accomplished young dancers. The screen portion of the bill will be featured by W. C. Fields in "The Man on the Flying Trapeze," a nonsensical comedy, based on the henpecked husband, irate mother-in-law motif. Kathleen Howard, Grady Sutton, Mary Brian, Lucian Littlefield and Oscar Apfel lead the supporting cast. The bill will be completed by Fox Movietone News and orchestral contributions under the baton of Phil Lampkin.

James Cagney and Pat O'Brien are costarred in "The Irish in Us," the screen feature for the new week, beginning tomorrow at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater. The supporting cast is headed by Frank McHugh, Allen Jenkins, Olivia de Havilland and Mary Gordon. The story concerns a New York family in which the sons are policeman, fireman and roustabout, with a penchant for fisticuffing and the prize ring. The story swings from comedy to pathos and back again with agreeable regularity. On the stage, Phil Spitalny returns to the boards he has previously graced with his "Charm Hour" orchestra of 32 feminine instrumentalists. This is the foremost organization of its kind on the American stage and under Spitalny's conductorship may be relied upon for music of the first rank. Furthermore, numerous specialists, both vocal and instrumental, add to the diversity of the act. The Universal News and Freddie Clark's pit orchestra will round out the program.

"The Farmer Takes a Wife," the film version of the play by Frank B. Elser and Marc Connelly that opened last season at the National Theater, will be seen for the first time in the Capital as foremost screen feature of the bill scheduled to begin a week's engagement at the Palace Theater tomorrow. In this subject, Henry Fonda and Margaret Hamilton have the roles they created on the stage. The June Walker part is played by Janet Gaynor and Herb Williams' comic role of Fortune Friendly is enacted by "Slim" Summerville. The story is of the 1850s, when the railroads were just beginning to encroach upon the prestige of the Erie Canal as a connecting link between the Eastern Seaboard and the Middle West. Charles Bickford and Andy Devine are prominent in the supporting cast. The bill will be augmented by short sound subjects and the Metrotone News.

For the week beginning tomorrow, the Warner Brothers Metropolitan Theater will present "Paris in Spring," a Paramount starring vehicle for Tullio Carminati and Mary Ellis, as the foremost feature of its screen bill. Ida Lupino, William Blakeley, Jessie Ralph and Lynne Overman are advantageously cast in this subject, which boasts a musical score by Gordon and Revel. The story is a romantic one and introduces a new songstress to the screen in the person of Miss Ellis, who has achieved fame as an operatic star, actress and musical comedy comedienne. The program will be supplemented by short sound subjects and full, 15-minute newsreel.

• • • •

John Boles and Jean Muir are the costars of "Orchids to You," the film story of a susceptible young lawyer and a florist, which comes to the screen of the Columbia Theater tomorrow as chief screen feature for the week. The comedy, in which the picture is said to abound, is in the capable hands of the droll Charles Butterworth. Others in support are Ruthelma Stevens, Arthur Lake, Harvey Stephens, Sidney Toler and Arthur Treacher. Comedy, short reels and news events will round out the entertainment.

Glen Echo Park, at the height of its midsummer season, with all amusements—and there are more than 50 to intrigue the interest of the pleasure-seekers—going full blast, tomorrow night will hold an authorized District A. A. U. meet in the Crystal Pool, in which the District diving championships will be at stake. The Spanish Garden ballroom and all of the thrilling rides, not to mention the many concessions and the Midway of Fun, offer diversion for those not interested in aquatic sports.

The Willard Roof Players—although why they should be called that now is one of the minor mysteries—who last summer presented "The Drunkard" for weeks on end on top of Col. Somerville's midtown tavern, beginning next Wednesday will offer "East Lynne" in the auditorium of the National Press Club. Free beer and pretzels will preserve something of the flavor, so to speak, of the original Willard group. A few new additions have been made to the acting personnel.

Movie Boners

Hollywood, Aug. 8.

THERE is a flicker flaw in "Murder in the Fleet," according to Harry Spitzer, who insists that the murder is committed by an arm protruding from a doorway. The sleeve of the coat is of dark material. Anyway, this is the clew that the audience is given.

Later, however, when the murderer is discovered, he is wearing a light suit, and he had no time to change while on the boat.

It is probable that this is a flicker flaw, and that the script girl failed to check on the color of the suits when the scenes were shot at different times. It is also likely that a different suit was purposely shown to throw the fans off the track of the real murderer. Tricks such as this are often done in mystery flickers.

But here is a boner that is strictly a flaw in costume, for there is nothing to be gained by deception.

In "The Broadway Gondolier" and in the sequence on the Venice Canal, Edward Singer writes that, when Dick Powell first appears as the gondolier, he is seen wearing pearl earrings. Yet in the same scene and without a chance of getting out of the gondola, Powell is seen wearing ringed earrings. Can it be that when Dick Powell goes boating he carries a spare pair of earrings with him?

KATHARINE HEPBURN in "Break of Hearts" discovers Charles Boyer in a restaurant, writes Reva Feuer, and, as she rushes in, one can notice that Miss Hepburn's hair is in tight curls. Miss Hepburn sits at the table, plays a scene, and, when she gets up to leave, her hair is all fluffed out and sitting on her shoulders.

The concluding shot of this sequence was probably filmed days later than the opening shot and both the script girl and Miss Hepburn's hairdresser failed to note the different haircomb.

It is in "Murder Man" with Spencer Tracy that Virginia Bruce rushes out of the office, gets into a taxi and hurries to Tracy, who is at police headquarters telling on himself. When Miss Bruce gets into the taxi, says Albert Leschinski, she is wearing a light print dress. When she arrives at the captain's office, she is wearing a dark dress with a white collar.

Is the taxi outfitted with a wardrobe and a dressing room for Virginia Bruce?

During the fist fight in "Stolen Harmony" between George Raft and the gangster, writes K. Priola, Raft comes through all messed up. Yet, throughout the brawl, the gangster remains with his hat on. All I can say to that is that the gangster should have been polite and shown some courtesy to George Raft by taking off his hat.

When Warner Baxter goes dancing in the night club sequence in "Under the Pampas Moon," claims Leonard Goldstein, he is wearing cowboy shoes. However, when there is a closeup of Baxter dancing, he is seen wearing regular shoes.

FRED MACMURRY, in "Men Without Names," enters his room in the boarding house in a particular sequence, and the room is in complete darkness, says Joseph Saracco, although outside it is bright and sunny. MacMurray turns on the electric light, and one can see that the shades in the room are half drawn, and that the sun is pouring in. It certainly was a very peculiar scene.

In "Oil for the Lamps of China," as the picture is unreeled, the book, "Oil for the Lamps of China," is seen. As the flicker progresses, writes Adele Felber, so should the pages of the novel; at least to give the impression that they are keeping pace with each other. But, although they turn the pages on the screen, they always turned to the same page, and if you're interested enough you can read a few of the printed words to prove this.

Joe E. Brown escapes from the kidnapers in "Alibi Ike" and enters the baseball game between the Cubs and the Giants. When Brown fans the next to the last Giant batter, insists Bill Golden, it is evident that this batter is wearing a Cardinal baseball uniform.

There are four movie boners in "The Crusades," according to Cecil B. DeMille's script girl and secretary, Emily Barrye, and she insists that no one person can discover the four flicker flaws looking at the picture only once.

Bill Compromises On Alien Tax Issue

By the Associated Press.

The House Ways and Means Committee moved yesterday to settle a dispute between Secretaries Morgenthau and Hull by approving a bill exempting employes of foreign governments who are in the United States from American income taxes.

Morgenthau had issued regulations subjecting the foreigners to American income taxes. Hull, in a letter to Chairman McReynolds (Democrat), Tennessee, of the House Foreign Affairs Commitee, protested.

The Ways and Means Committee reported a bill exempting salaries on a reciprocal basis—in other words, granting tax exemption to employes of those governments which grant similar exemption to American agents.

PWA Projects Win Rhode Island O. K.

$7,000,000 Bonds Voted, Other Plans Rejected.

Secretary Ickes received word yesterday that bond issues permitting construction of $7,000,000 worth of PWA projects had been voted in the Rhode Island election. Turned down by the voters were numerous Works Progress Administration projects and an auditorium to cost $825,000 and to be erected with PWA funds.

"The Rhode Island situation," said Ickes, "reminds me of the woman who received a telegram saying her husband had been killed. It said that his neck and both arms had been broken. Later she received a telegram saying the accident was not as serious as had been believed. Only the husband's neck and one arm had been broken."

Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress administrator, joined President Roosevelt in insisting that he didn't know in advance that there was to be an election in Rhode Island.

$81,001,961 Paid U. S. in Back Taxes

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury said yesterday delinquent taxes collected in the financial year ended June 30 came to $81,001,961 for a new high record.

Secretary Morgenthau reported that the 2,205 agents engaged in delinquent work during 1935, had averaged $36,735. The average production per deputy in the previous year was $28,896 and $22,368 in 1933.

Previously the highest production in deliquent assessments and collections was put at $78,616,879 in 1927.

Discovering America

With Maxine Davis

Iowans Display Cheerful Political Stability With Recovery Now Soberly Under Way.

Dubuque, Iowa, Aug. 8.—When the band at the next presidential convention begins to play 'Iow-ay, I-oway, that's where the tall corn grows," I'll know what they mean.

All day I have been driving across this sun-dappled State between corn rows, forest tall, on each side of the road. Miles upon miles of corn, with a little wind making a gossipy rustling in the corn.

Iowa is a beautiful State, lovely with the mature beauty of rich fertility. It is also the most heartening, the most stable spot I have visited in the 7,000 miles I have gypsied thus far.

For prosperity is coming back to Iowa. Not so fast, not so flamboyant, not so smug a prosperity as it once was, nor so cocksure, but a prodigal, returned and welcomed. You know it as soon as you cross the border into the State. There is paint on the barns. The houses look trim. There are hollyhocks and nasturtiums around the homes, and here and there a new orange rocking chair. You see new farm machinery, and in the small towns women wearing store dresses.

Crops Prospering.

The crops are good; there's been plenty of moisture. Farmers can afford to pay their labor, often about $1.75 a day, and two meals.

There's more thinking and less floundering here than most places. And there is a reason for this: Iowans have a leader. To them, while President Roosevelt is not Allah, Henry Wallace certainly is his prophet. Never in the course of this trip of mine have a I found a State which generally believed so much in anyone of the exponents of the New Deal principles.

But as Henry Wallace is no demagogue, speaking ex cathedra, nor a forceful leader of men elisting unthinking cohorts of enthusiasts under his banner, but rather a thoughtful exponent of his philosophy, one finds Iowans thinking rather than shouting or following.

And they're beginning to be conscious of their own power. I stopped to ask directions after I'd gotten lost on a seductive little side road somewhere near Marengo, and a farmer about to climb onto a wagon high with hay told me how to go, in my car and in my politics.

"You city people," he announced, "got to see that the farmer has more money coming to him. Because you can't eat cheap cars and radios. A new dress is pretty, lady, but it ain't so tasty as a pork chop.

"Now, I don't hold for killing off the pigs every year. But you got to do it until you cut down them tariff walls and open a foreign market for our lard.

And That's Not All.

"And that ain't all. We've got to keep the land good for growing. It's got to be a national policy. We can't wear it out the way we been doing, treating it as if it never got used up."

He didn't seem exactly sure of what the national land preservation policy should be, but his vote is going to be cast to demand that there is one.

I heard this sentiment expressed in varying ways, in different places, from agricultural students at the State college at Ames, from the young girl who served me a sandwich and a galss of milk at Tama. And so on.

There isn't any radicalism in Iowa. The so-called radical farm organizations are pretty hungry and thin. Nobody cares a whoop for Huey Long, and not very many for Father Coughlin. But there's this sort of thinking.

And there's also a feeling that neither Democratic nor Republican parties, as such, adequately represent the Iowa farmers. It's my guess that a third party in 1936 wouldn't make much impression; loyalty to Roosevelt, as Wallace's superior, is great. But I shouldn't be surprised if some vigorous cornfield statesman could lead Iowa away from both of them four years after that.

Editor Explains Cartoon To Japanese Emissary

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—A letter of explanation about a recent cartoon of the Emperor of Japan was sent today by Frank Crowninshield, editor of Vanity Fair, to the Japanese Ambassador, Hirosi Saito, in Washington.

"I particularly regret," wrote Crowninshield, "that because of a misconception on the part of the Japanese readers, we were supposed to have portrayed the emperor in the act of drawing a ricksha, obviously a menial occupation.

"But I think that if you, yourself, will look at the drawing, you will see that our readers could have derived no such an idea, as the wagon is obviously that of a military carriage. At any rate, it was so intended, and appears so in the drawing."

Man Shot in Argument To Recover, One Jailed

Bel Air, Md., Aug. 8 (AP).—Attaches at the Havre de Grace Hospital today reported improvement in the condition of Charles Akins, Harford County man whose left arm was torn off by a blast from a shotgun, and said he probably would recover.

James Patterson, Grayston, was being held here in connection with the shooting. Akins was shot at Patterson's home yesterday following an argument between the two men, Sheriff Granville C. Boyle said.

Louis, Baer Signed to Meet in September in N. Y. or Chicago

$250,000 Gate Seen For Nontitle Battle By Promoter Jacobs

Detroiter Pleased, Says He'll Beat Ex-Champ With Ease.

Hoffman Also Confident, Asserts Maxie Will Trounce Rival.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Joe Louis will throw his next assortment of fistic bombs at the chin and frame of the former heavyweight king, Max Baer.

Less than 24 hours after he had scored his twenty-fourth consecutive ring triumph by smashing King Levinsky into a helpless hulk at the White Sox baseball park last night, the sensational Brown Bomber from Detroit was signed by Promoter Mike Jacobs to tangle with the Livermore Larruper at either New York or Chicago on the night of September 26 or 27.

With the contracts stuffed away in his hip pocket, Jacobs immediately went on a shopping tour with his prize match, which he figures should draw a gross gate of $250,000. The Sporting Club of Illinois, headed by Sheldon Clark, millionaire sportsman, asked for several days to study the situation, but announced it would not be outbid by New York or any other city for the important battle.

Three Alternatives.

Jacobs, one of the shrewdest promoters in the game, had three alternatives. He could stage the fight in Chicago under the sponsorship of the Sporting Club of Illinois, a newly organized group composed of wealthy Chicago sportsmen; he could run it at New York, probably at the Polo Grounds, under the sponsorship of the Twentieth Century Club, of which he is a promoter, or he could step out and do it himself. The latter possibility was remote, however. If the fight were staged at Chicago, it would be held at either Soldier Field, scene of the Jack Dempsey-Gene Tunney spectacle of 1927, or at the White Sox park, which could be arranged to seat 70,000 to 75,000.

"I intend to hold the bids open for ten days," Jacobs said. "Naturally, I want the place that can offer the largest gate. My mind is open on the matter."

Louis, who in slightly more than a year has battered his way as a dangerous contender for the title held by Jimmy Braddock, was elated with the news of the signing.

"I'll fight anywhere," he said without a change of expression, "I'll lick Baer just as easily as I licked the others."

Ancil Hoffman, manager for Baer, who watched Louis stop Levinsky in 2 minutes and 21 seconds, said he didn't care where the fight was staged and that he was confident Baer could whip the menacing Negro challenger.

"Excellent Chance."

"Madison Square Garden has promised us a match with Schmeling, but I'm convinced that the German doesn't want any part of Baer. So we will take Louis instead," Hoffman said. "I think Max has an excellent chance of whipping Louis. He's the man that can do it if anyone can. Max's hands are not as bad as some folks think."

Madison Square Garden's option on Baer expired last midnight. And it was only a few hours later that Jacobs had the necessary papers signed for the Baer-Louis match. Hoffman signed for Baer and John Roxborough signed for the Detroit Negro. No announcement was made as to the "cut" offered the fighters, although their combined share will aggregate 50 per cent of the net.

Travis to Stay At 3d Base, Says Griff

Nats Start on Last Road Trip Tonight; Will Play 19 Games.

THE reported transfer of Cecil Travis from third base to the Nats' outfield is only a remote possibility, Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Club, declared yesterday.

Interpreting published stories of Manager Bucky Harris' reported plan to move Travis to the outfield as a reflection on the young third baseman's defensive ability, Griffith vigorously defended Travis' play in the infield.

"Bucky Harris and I are not at odds on the subject," said Griffith. "Harris is not dissatisfied with Travis' play at third base. If we can strengthen the team by moving him to the outfield, of course, we would do it, but that is not our present intention.

"In the first place, who is there that we have who is a more valuable third baseman than Travis? All the talk of making an outfielder out of him has been caused mostly by his heavy hitting. If his hitting were not so valuable, we wouldn't think of using Travis in the outfield, where we need hitting strength.

Explains Slump.

"The hot spell wore Travis down recently and his play at third has not been up to par, but every ball player has his off days. Why, up in New York the last time the team was there, Ossie Bluege made two errors in one game and could have been charged with two more, and there isn't a steadier fielder than Bluge.

"I suppose this fellow Buddy Lewis down in Chattanooga is the cause of a lot of the talk about Travis. They say he's a fine young third baseman who will hit, but he's only 18 years old and he's no surething to make good in the big leagues. People up here hear fine reports about Lewis and then let their imaginations run away with 'em, forgetting that Travis is a pretty good third baseman himself."

The Washington ball club will entrain tonight for a three-game series in Boston, starting tomorrow, that will open a 19-game road trip before the team returns to Griffith Stadium on August 31.

With two off days affording a complete rest for his pitching staff, such as it is, Manager Bucky Harris will have available Earl Whitehill, Buck Newsom and Irving Hadley for the three games with the Red Sox. The two clubs will meet in a single game tomorrow and a double-header on Sunday.

In Boston, the Nats will be joined by Phil Henbieck, purchased from Albany, who will perform in relief pitching roles.

The Nats' road trip will carry them successively into Boston, Detroit, Cleveland, Chicago and St. Louis.

Larry French Fined.

Chicago, Aug. 8 (AP).—Larry French, Chicago Cubs' southpaw, was fined $50 today for his verbal attack on Umpire Stark in yesterday's game with Pittsburgh. The remark, occasioned by Stark calling Arky Vaughn safe at first on a close play, resulted in French being banished from the game.

A's Trounce Yanks, 9-6, With Rally

Get Four Runs in Ninth, Drop Foe Five Games Behind Tigers.

Gehrig Hits 18th Homer of '35; Plays 1,600th Consecutive Tilt.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Although Lou Gehrig celebrated the playing of his 1,600th consecutive game by cracking out his eighteenth home run of the season, the New York Yankees were unable to halt the Athletics' ninth-inning rally today, falling before Philadelphia, 9 to 6, in the opening game of the series. The defeat dropped the Yanks five games back of the Tigers, who trimmed the White Sox.

The Yankees headed into the ninth with a 6-to-5 lead, the margin furnished by Gehrig's homer in the second, but the Athletics drove Vito Tamulis from the mound and continued their attack on Pat Malone. Five hits, including a double by Paul Richards, rang off their bats as they sent four runs across the plate. In the sixth they had sent Jimmy Deshong to the showers with another four-run attack after scoring their first tally in the fourth.

Registers His Thirteenth.

Johnny Marcum was touched for 11 hits, three of which were made by Tony Lazzeri, who drove in half of the Yanks' runs, but was still on the mound at the finish to register his thirteenth victory of the campaign.

Gehrig's homer, his only safe blow of the game, was hit No. 2,087 and his 366th home run in 5,997 times at bat since he started his record string June 1, 1925. It also gave him a batting average of .343 for the 1,600 games.

Crowder Pitches Tigers to 5-2 Win

Detroit, Aug. 8 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers lengthened their lead over the New York Yankees in the American League pennant chase to five games today as they defeated the Chicago White Sox, 5 to 2, in the first of a four-game series.

General Alvin Crowder went the route for the league champions, and was in trouble only in the first.

Ruth Is Due to Reject Indoor Circus Offer

New York, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Babe Ruth probably will reject an offer to play an important role in "Jumbo," indoor circus to be produced in New York in September, Christy Walsh, Ruth's business manager, said today.

"Ruth has no ambitions to start a stage career," Walsh said, "and probably will turn down the proposition. His main interest at this time is major league baseball."

Mrs. Powell, Claiming Default, Refuses to Face Mrs. Walper.

Rock Creek's Manager Orders Match Played This Morning.

A BOMBSHELL was dropped in the semifinal round of the District women's public links championship yesterday at Rock Creek.

Mrs. J. T. Powell, of Manor, scheduled to meet Mrs. Leo Walper, of Kenwood, medalist, claimed a defualt when her opponent did not appear on the tee at 10:25 a. m. The default was approved by Ed Burns, course manager, who is conducting the tournament.

Mrs. Walper showed up at the course shortly before 2 p. m., ready for the match, and was informed that Mrs. Powell had been given it by default. The Kenwood champion explained she had to go to Shepherdstown, W. Va., to seen an ill relative, and had asked Mrs. Powell Wednesday afternoon to delay the match four hours in order that she might make the trip.

Ordered Played.

Manager Burns, after hearing both sides, late yesterday afternoon ordered the match between Mrs. Powell and Mrs. Walper played at 9 a. m. today "in the interest of fair sport."

Mrs. Powell, however, said last night she would not play Mrs. Walper, that she already had won her match by default, and would appear on the tee to play Mrs. Hope Wilkerson, who entered the finals yesterday by eliminating the defending champion, 95-pound Betty Keeler, 2 up.

In the event Mrs. Powell and Mrs. Walper play today, the final probably will take place tomorrow morning.

Phils Win Two From Giants, 7-4, 6-3

Walters Wins First, Davis Scores Over Carl Hubbell in Last.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 8.—The New York Giants' lead dwindled to two games today as the low-ranking Phillies, showing no respect for Hal Schumacher and Carl Hubbell, captured a double-header while the second-place Cubs were whipping the Pirates in a single contest. The scores were 7 to 4 and 6 to 3.

In the opening game the Phils landed on Schumacher for nine hits in the four innings he was on the mound. They bunched seven of them in the third and fourth frames for all of their runs.

Bucky Walters, the converted infielder, allowed the Giants only seven hits and one run until the ninth. He weakened in the last frame, however, and had to be helped by Orville Jorgens.

Curt Davis, chalking up his third victory of the year over Hubbell in the nightcap, had the Giants shut out until the ninth

Veteran Barcelona Pete Wins Charles Town Feature By Nose

Outruns Miss Catalan in Stretch

Win Tickets Return $14; Throng of 3,500 Fans Sees Program.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., Aug. 8.—Barcelona Pete, who used to be favorite Maryland's mile tracks, found the mud he loves under his hoofs this afternoon and gained the necessary momentum to win the feature race. Ridden by Jimmy Feltner, of the Berryville (Va.) Feltners, Barcelona Pete stretched his ancient nose out just long enough to send Miss Catalan down to defeat. The staggering third in the field of eight was Foggy Dawn.

One of the more important items connected with Barcelona Pete's victory was the $14 mutuel, although he looked all the part of a 100-to-1 shot as the field passed the judge's stand for the first time. Then, Barcelona Pete was an unimpressive sixth, but that's the way he runs.

While Foggy Dawn and Follow On were burning the pace-setting pill, old Pete was finding his racing legs. When Jocky Feltner gave the signal, he dug along the rail and slowly, but surely, cut down the leaders. Miss Catalan, also among the trailers in the early running, became a threat as the finish neared and the pair bore down on the tiring Foggy Dawn. In the ensuing battle, Barcelona Pete had the best punch.

The races were run over a sticky, drying out track and under a cloudy sky. More than 3,500 were out to have their fling at the mutuels.

The combination of Jockey H. Gower and Trainer L. E. Barnes won the first two races. Lampoon, at 12.20, triumphed in the opener in a hard drive with Lady Buck and Dunwin, while Chisel led all the way to take the second from Polten and Three Grand. Chisel was the favorite at $4.20.

Hinight made it two victories in as many days by staggering home ahead of a field of seven in the third race. Johnny Shanks had the mount and he barely held the son of Bright Knight together long enough to hold Sambo G., a good shot, safe by a head. Most Always was third. The winner was the choice at $4.80.

The jockey-trainer team of Gower and Barnes scored their third victory of the day in the sixth race, Dunora leading Harmoak to the wire for a $4.20 mutuel. Madge's Fellow took the final.

A happy group went down under the stands earlier in the afternoon to collect a $41.40 daily double.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Suffolk Downs Race Track, Aug. 9.

Trainer Joe will look around before he speaks hereafter. I'll say one thing for Joe, he's an ardent Bennings rooter. After trying to pull in a winner for the firm in the first three races, Joe was burning up. Then, in the fourth, Jockey Wimmer let Top High, our selection, lag a little too long and the horse was third. That made Joe sizzle. We were standing by the rail when Joe remarks, "That guy Wimmer couldn't ride in a box car with both doors shut." From somewhere came a voice which, if I'm not mistaken, said, "And you couldn't pick a winner out of yesterday's charts." Joe was looking for the "wise guy," as he called him, later, for Advising Anna, Gold Step and High Delight all clicked at fair prices. I see by the papers that Clocker Mike is hitting it rather rough at Charles Town. If he can't make the grade on a 6-furlong track, it looks as though he'll have to make a half-mile man out of him. BILL.

First race—Love Lost seems to have found a spot for winning purposes. Stafford has been named for the saddle action and I see no reason for mistakes. Rutland is a fair sort and should take the place. Huge Copy has been whispered around and may surprise.

Second race—Genial Edna's last was a good effort and she has worked well. This might be the right place. Onus, with Winters to do the booting, will be ready if the top one makes mistakes. Wee Lad for the minor award.

Third race—Sun Clothing has run some fair races. This one is the come-from-behind type and may knock off these cheap ones in the stretch drive. Joe Jay did well with maidens and must be respected. Transparent for the show.

Fourth race — Attauquechee is long on name and short on courage, but I'm going to try to make this one score here. Little I. Hanford has the mount and he'll do. Peace Move and Stumptown appear to be the best of the others.

Fifth race—Tennie R. came through with a good effort the last time she was out. She should fare well at this route. Trickling and Three Daggers to battle it out for the second money.

Sixth race—Conchita, a recent sprint winner, goes to the bat at the same route tomorrow. Howell gets the saddle call and I expect him to take the shortest way home. Moane Keala and Aunt Flor are the ones that may do the pressing.

Seventh race—All Hail seems ideally placed in this field. Needs cheap company and gets it here. Ramus and Yancey should fill out the money positions on the board.

Eigth race—Seminole Queen barely missed at long odds last out. Deserves attention here. Euclid and Helen Bab for the place and show.

Charles Town Selections.

1—Rosemarie B., Foxtee, Mayetta.
2—Herself, Fairio, Strolling Duke.
3—Pinkie Heaven, Stylish Mack, Stepee.
4—Hinight, Tiger Cat, Consummation.
5—Tuleyries Wand, Ado, Red Riot.
6—Small Change, Lodorous, Miss Patches.
7—George Jessel, Valdosta, Doubtless.

Best bet—Hinight. —By Clocker Mike.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LAMPOON, $12.20, $6.60, $4.00; LADY BUCK, $13.60, $6.20; DUNWIN, $3.20.

LAMPOON, fractious at the post and placed outside the gates, was away well, shuffled back at the first turn and came to the outside entering the stretch and was ridden out to win. LADY BUCK was rushed to the front, was rated along, but could not stave off the winner. DUNWIN followed the pace and finished along the rail in the deepest going.

SECOND RACE—About seven furlongs. Purse, $150. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 3:05. Off at 3:08. Winner, Mrs. H. Talbott's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—$4.60, $3.20, $2.40; POLITEN, $3.40, $2.40; THREE GRAND, $2.20.

CHISEL, much the best in the going, drew out to a long lead on the back stretch and won as rider pleased. POLITEN, away in the first flight, was allowed to drop back on the first turn, worked his way up, but could not menace the winner. THREE GRAND, closest to the pace during the early running, tired and just lasted to beat PRETTY BOY.

THIRD RACE—About seven furlongs. Purse, $150; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:37. Off at 3:40. Winner J. W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HINIGHT, $4.80, $4.60, $2.80; SAMBO G., $11.40, $5.40; MOST ALWAYS, $2.40.

HINIGHT, well ridden, drew out swinging into the back stretch, was hustled along in front and barely lasted to stave off SAMBO G. The latter was rated off the pace and, once in command, was always a slow set going, was rushed into a contending position, but could not menace the winner.

FOURTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 4:08. Off at 4:14. Winner, P. J. Field of 50 to Seek A. A. U. Laurels at Takoma Pool Tonight

Keen Battle For Titles Is Seen

100-Yd. Breast-Stroke Event for Women Is One of Features.

THE usual hard-fought performances which mark the annual quest of Washington's men and women swimmers for District championships promise to provide a keen flair to tonight's District A. A. U. championships at Takoma Pool. Some 50 contestants will compete.

While chances of setting a new mark for number of record-breaking races are more or less nil in view of the big open meet at Takoma two weeks ago when seven standards were shattered, the struggle for titles should be as warmly waged or more so.

The open meet saw Margaret Hoffman, Washington's Olympic swimmer, who competes under no club colors, set a new 100-yard breast-stroke mark of 1:28, which can hardly be expected to be broken tonight. Yet, Miss Hoffman's place on the program makes the breast-stroke event stand out as one of the high spots of the evening.

Ann Bono Entered.

Ann Bono, the Shoreham's little sprinter, who broke all District records for the 50-yard free-style two weeks ago, possibly might lower her new mark of 31 seconds in defending her championship, but the chances of a new record being established in the women's backstroke is much more probable before the combined assault of Miss Bono, Helen Richardson, of Maryland Club Gardens, who is the favorite; Florence Farwell, unattached, and Ann Arnson, of Ambassador, and Lydia Cort, of the Shoreham. Miss Richardson is the choice to win the 150-yard medley and is expected to set a new record for the event.

Another probable new record for a District swimmer, but not for a District meet, is likely to come in the men's 150-yard backstroke in which Bill Marmion, of the Y. M. C. A., enters a second choice to Bartlett Ewell, of Maryland Club Gardens. Marmion's own mark is likely to be lowered, but not the mark set for District competition by John Wicklum, of Brooklyn, two weeks ago.

Seek Free-Style Record.

Ewell and Ernie Boggs, of the Y. M. C. A., are out to lower Bob Jordan's 2:21 record for the 200-yard free style, ut the chanse of doing so are slim. Jordan is not defending his title. The 200-yard breast-stroke record appears safe, with Dyer Ghormley, champion and record-holder, not defending his title. George Groff, of the University of Pennsylvania, is not defending his sprint championships and his records are likewise safe with Joe Latthe 100, and Harry Toulmin, of the Salle, of the Shoreham, favored in "Y" in the 50. The "Y" is a certainty to grab the team title won by Shoreham last year.

Men's Events.

50-yard free style—Robert Clark, Henry Cohen, Edward Murphy, Harry Toulmin (Y. M. C. A.); Alex McMillan (Shoreham).

150-yard back stroke—William Marmion, James Orme, Ernie Boggs (Y. M. C. A.); S. B. Fitzhugh (Shoreham); Bartlett Ewell (Maryland Club Gardens).

300-yard medley relay—Y. M. C. A., No. 1, Orme, Moncure, Toulmin; No. 2, Marmion, Clay, Clarke; No. 3, Boggs, Cohen, Murphy.

Swims Three Races Tonight

No such easy posture as this for Helen Richardson, of Maryland Club Gardens, in the District A. A. U. swim championships tonight at Takoma Pool. The University of Iowa co-ed is entered in the women's breast-stroke, back-stroke and medley swim. She is the favorite to win the last two.

Wightman Squad Is Named by U. S.

Helen Jacobs Is Certain to Be No. 1 Player.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 8.—The nation's first four ranking players and two others whose tennis exploits have attracted attention this summer were chosen today to represent the United States in the Wightman Cup series against Great Britain's leading stars at Forest Hills Friday and Saturday of next week.

The team announced by the United States Lawn Tennis Association is made up of Helen Jacobs, three times national champion; Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Brookline, Mass.; Carolin Babcock, of Los Angeles; Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of New York; Mrs. Ethel Burkhardt Arnold, of San Francisco, and Mrs. John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia. The non-playing captain will be Mrs. Hazel Hotchkiss Wightman, donor of the cup.

Although the lineup for the five singles and two doubles matches will not be revealed until the draw on Wednesday, it was certain that Miss Jacobs would draw the No. 1 singles assignment.

Lakin Registers a 73 In Hagerstown Golf

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 8.—E. Aldine Lakin, who only took up golf four years ago, set a 1935 amateur course record at Fountain Head Club this week while playing in the President's Cup tournament. He shot a 73, 2 over par.

Lakin had only one birdie, on the second hole, negotiating the first nine in 1 under par, and the second nine in 3 over par.

Cincinnati Builds 6,000 More Seats

Night Baseball Crowds Force Addition.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Aug. 8.—The Cincinnati Reds began today terracing the outfield of Crosley Field to provide room for 6,000 additional seats when needed. The park's present capacity is rated at 24,000.

Plans to make room for more seats followed incidents of a week ago, when more than 30,000 persons jammed the park for a night baseball game, and an unruly throng encroached on the playing surface.

St. Louis, Aug. 8 (AP).—Baseball—from the viewpoint of the front office at least—is definitely on the mend in St. Louis.

Although he declined to reveal the exact figures, President Sam Breadon, of the St. Louis Cardinals, said that the attendance of his team's first 42 home games this year exceeded that of the first 42 games last year by 80 per cent.

"Out Fishin'" ∫ ∫

By Jack Hawley.

FISHING tournaments and rodeos are coming more and more into fashion in Florida and the Gulf region. Tarpon tournaments for some years have been staged at Boca Grande, Sarasota, Venice and Tampa, on the Florida west coast, and fishing rodeos at Port Isabel and Arancas, Tex. Now Galveston and Lake Charles, La., have joined the list.

Several local anglers have for years been visiting the above places and getting their share of the prizes given for the various weights of tackle specified—light and heavy weight class.

Fishing went into a slump Wednesday, but picked up again yesterday. Prospects are good for the week-end. The northeast wind has moderated and it is hoped that the usual "three-day blow" is now over. It is a certainty that all anglers will take a gamble on the weather between now and August 15, because the moon is constantly moving into the position conducive to good fishing.

Capt. Dewey Perkins, of Colonial Beach, took out a party of five local anglers in his boat, Gypsy Queen, a few days ago and returned after six hours in search of rockfish with 17 weighing from 2½ pounds to 7 pounds each. Several large croakers also were taken. All fish were caught "still trolling," a name that conflicts with the true name "drifting" the bait according to the strength of the tide. Fishing for rockfish (large) should be done either in the early morning or at sundown and afterward.

This sport should be a joy to all anglers, but only a few of the thousands of fishermen take advantage of its possibilities. It is a most uncertain type of fishing—one never knows when he is going to make a good catch or come home empty-handed. Trolling is an excellent method of getting the rockfish, and drones are used for lures. For the benefit of those who have done little or no rock fishing, the following may help you in rigging up your tackle on your next trip over a rock pile or good oyster bar. If you prefer using a hand line be sure to wear leather gloves. Try using a light weight rod and about an 18-pound test line.

The hook-up is as follows and is contributed to this column by George B. Pratt, 1742 K street northwest: Fasten one swivel to the end of your line and attach a 2-foot wire leader, to the leader fasten another swivel and then two No. 5 hooks having bronze cable leaders about 8 inches in length. The object is to make the crab more secure, using either a small or medium sized whole soft crab (live). Insert one hook through the "apron" from the rear and off center; the other hook is thrust through the opposite side of the crab to form a balance. The two hooks will then be separated and form a V. The crab is carried by the tide away from the boat (anchored) and has a natural swimming posture. No sinker is used, as the weight of the crab sinks it at different depths according to the "pull" of the tide. Long-shank hooks must be used. This "rig" is a good one to use as it prolongs the life of the crab, is natural and will hold the fish securely when it strikes the bait.

A long-felt need of providing the public and especially sportsmen with information regarding fishing in Virginia has been supplied by the Commission on Game and Inland Fisheries in a publication entitled, "Virginia's Fishing Streams and Ponds." This booklet gives complete information regarding fishing regulations, licenses, etc.; location, by counties, of the various streams and ponds throughout the State; the kind of fish with which they are stocked and, also, supplies the names of the game wardens and information as to where the visiting fishermen may stop for food and lodging within the vicinity of the particular stream.

Golfers to Start Virginia Open Tomorrow

Field of 100 Is Expected; Early Arrivers Find Par Elusive.

By the Associated Press.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Aug. 8.—The entry list stood at 60 today in the State Open golf tournament, which will be played over the Old Dominion course Saturday and Sunday with Old Dominion Club officials anticipating a final total of 100.

Several of the favorites are already on hand, tuning up in preparation for the 72-hole tournament and a shot at the title won for the last two years by Bobby Cruickshank.

Cruickshank has predicted that even par, possibly slightly under, will be necessary to win the title over the easy par-70 layout, but most of the early arrivers were finding trouble keeping their strokes down to regulation figures.

Isaacs Cards 69.

Jack Isaacs, home club professional whose shots have been failing him of late, found the secret again to rattle off a fine 69 and hopes to be in top shape when the Saturday firing starts.

Other favorites include Benny Loving, of Charlottesville; Chandler Harper, who won the State amateur title here three times before he joined the professional ranks, and Rut Coffey, of Winchester.

Riegel to Compete.

Bobby Riegel, Southern amateur champion, will be shooting at the championship and, if missing that, the title of low scoring amateur. He may face stern opposition from Morton McCarthy, of Norfolk, Middle Atlantic champion, who should score well on the wide-open course.

The tricky greens of mixed Bermuda and crab grass may exact a stiff penalty. Heeding Bobby Cruickshank's prediction that the player who sinks his putts will win the tournament, most of the entries have been concentrating on work around the greens.

Levinsky's Panic Puzzle to Gallico

town. I will trust what my eyes told me, namely, that the King was struck by the greatest expert on striking probably in ring history. Because Louis is not only the hardest puncher in years, but, equally as important, he is the most accurate. His aim is magnificent.

Every punch that he hit Levinsky landed in a vital spot beginning with the first short, sharp left hook, the effects of which I have already described, and which landed exactly on the point of the chin. All the others, rights and lefts, hit the King's chin or temple. There were no misses, no slide-bys, and no messy blows landing on cheek, or neck, or shoulder. He pumped them in just like a sharpshooter standing 10 feet from a 6-inch bull's eye.

I was merely trying to analyze the panic that beset Levinsky and turned a fellow who has stood up gamely under years of punishment, who was tough, brave and a seasoned campaigner into a broken, frightened, sickened fellow who hauled down the flag in surrender while still on his feet. It was wise and prudent, but not in accord with the traditions of the ring. But I wouldn't blame Levinsky for that. I would blame Louis. The man is simply a terror. And what a wise ringman. The final left-hook to the body that he let go must have felt like a major operation without anesthetic.

This department is all through picking against Louis and I don't care who his opponent is. The boy gets better every fight.

Winchester Asked To Play in League

Valley Berth Open After Heurich Withdrawal.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 8.—Valley League directors met here tonight to revise the schedule for the remainder of the season following the unexpected withdrawal of the Heurich Brewers, the league's traveling entry from Washington.

The Brewers, who played all their games away from home, said they found traveling expenses too great. They also found it a difficult task to play in both the Valley League and the Industrial League of Washington. Heurich won only two of six games in the second half and finished in fifth place in the first half.

The strong Winchester Park Club, which has been having trouble finding tough competition for its independent games, has been invited to take the Heurich franchise. The season ends on September 1, and each club has only 14 games to play.

Shields, Wood Net Victors; Vie Today

Mrs. Dorothy Andrus and Katherine Winthrop Are Upset.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Frank Shields, motion picture visitor from Hollywood, and Sidney B. Wood, recently returned Davis Cup alternate, ploughed into the semifinals of the men's singles in the Eastern Grass courts championships as expected today, while both favcrites to reach the women's final round were defeated.

Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., top seeded and fourth ranking player of the country, and Katherine Winthrop, of Boston, seeded fourth, failed to survive today's semifinals. Mrs. Andrus lost in three sets to Mrs. Mary Greef Harris, of Kansas City, Mo., 5—7, 6—3, 6—3, and Mrs. Agnes Lamme, of Rye, N. Y., eliminated Miss Winthrop 6—2, 6—2, in surprise victories.

Shields, on a vacation from California, trimmed Wilmer Hines, of Columbia, S. C., 6—2, 0—6, 6—1, and Wood, playing beautiful tennis, whipped Hal Surface, of Kansas City, Mo., 6—2, 6—2.

Wood Faces Shields.

Wood and Shields meet tomorrow afternoon in one of the men's semifinals and Frankie Parker, defending champion, of Spring Lake, N. J., and Bitsy Grant, of Atlanta, Ga., national clay court champion, collide in the other. Mrs. Lamme and Mrs. Harris clash for the women's crown Saturday morning.

Steadiness off the ground brought Mrs. Harris her victory over Mrs. Andrus. The Stamford veteran tried to win on her speed alone, and that proved insufficient to turn back the Kansas City matron, who was erratic in the opening set, but who had her shots under good control once the second got under way.

Brilliant play at the net and consistent chopping from back court gave Mrs. Lamme her triumph over Miss Winthrop. The Boston girl grew wild when she saw her best efforts nullified by Mrs. Lamme's fine play.

The Shields-Hines match was a comedy of foot-faults, with three officials combining to call faults against the services of both players. Hines appeared to be rattled most by their decisions, for game-point and sets-point were both lost to him on foot-faults in the opening set. Shields made effective use of his powerful service to score repeated aces, and in the final set it was the weapon with which he sent Hines down to defeat.

Woods spotted Surface a 4-2 lead in the first set of their match, and then "went to town," hitting beautifully off both wings to punch wide holes through the Missourian's defense.

Culpeper Tops Orange, 5-2; Leads Race

McIntyre Allows 2 Runs in First Frame, Then Settles Down.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

CULPEPER, Va., Aug. 8.—The Culpeper Athletic Club, which was tied with Front Royal for the Valley League lead, forged to the top position by defeating Orange here this afternoon, 5 to 2.

McIntyre, who started for Culpeper, was a bit unsteady in the first inning, allowing three hits and a walk for the visitors' only runs. "Lefty" then settled down, allowing Orange only three hits thereafter, only 27 men facing him in the remaining eight innings. Three double plays helped him.

Benninghoff, on the mound for Orange, allowed 11 hits, 5 of which were for two bases. Lowery, Brown and Metheny led in hitting for the locals, while Mundy was the only man to obtain more than one hit off McIntyre. Bergman had a busy day afield, accepting nine chances without a miscue.

Hash made a brilliant catch to rob Kessler of a hit in the fourth. Metheny also robbed Lugar of a safety in the second.

Culpeper plays Harrisonburg here Sunday.

Davis-Elkins Cancels Potomac State Game

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Keyser, W. Va., Aug. 8.—Dana "Horse" Lough, new director of athletics at Potomac State College, announced last night that the football game with Davis and Elkins College at Cumberland September 27 had been canceled by the latter school.

Lough revealed that "Cam" Henderson and Harley Staggers, former coaches of Davis and Elkins and Potomac State, respectively, had definitely agreed to a night contest in Cumberland, but neglected to sign contracts to close the deal. Harry "Bud" Shelton, Henderson's successor at Davis and Elkins, took advantage of the loophole to call off the game and instead of meeting the Catamounts in Cumberland, his team will play LaSalle College at Philadelphia on either September 27 or 28.

France Reduces Discount to 3%

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Aug. 8.—The Bank of France today lowered the discount rate from 3½ to 3 per cent. The rate on loans on gold bars was reduced from 7 per cent to 6 per cent. It was the first reduction on gold loans since the May financial crisis caused the rate to be raised from 3½ per cent. Loans on securities were reduced from 5 per cent to 4. Thirty-day-loan rates were reduced from 3½ to 3.

The French government has recently embarked on an economy program intended to cut living costs and reduce governmental costs. During the spring a great drain on the Bank of France's gold reserve caused the government to raise discount rates in order to halt speculation and maintain the exchange level of the franc.

$12 Hog Comes Back to Market After 6 Years

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 8.—The $12 hog came back today for the first time in six years.

Scoring another advance of 10 to 15 cents, hog prices rose to $12.05 per hundred weight, the highest price since August, 1929, when a top of $12.25 was reached.

Scant supplies of hogs at market centers coupled with the fact that storage supplies are abnormally low formed that basis of the market strength. Today's run here was only 7,000 head, compared with 22,000 a year ago.

Including the $2.25 per hundredweight processing tax, best hogs today cost in the neighborhood of $14.25, the highest since 1926.

Evidence that farmers are not in a position to take maximum advantage of the highest hog prices since before the depression is seen in the fact that Government authorities estimate a decrease of 20 per cent occured in the 1935 spring crop, compared with the 1934 crop.

In addition, the Department of Agriculture has predicted that inspected hog slaughter for the current market year will be the smallest in 25 years and that indications are that slaughter in 1935-36 will be even less.

The dearth of hogs can be traced principally to the 1934 drought and the AAA production-control program.

Treasury to Offer $100,000,000 More

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury will offer next Monday an additional issue of $100,000,000 of 20-25 year 2⅞ per cent bonds to the highest bidder, on a discount basis. Secretary Morgenthau said that it would constitute the department's last offering of long-term securities this month. In the meantime, however, the Treasury will continue its weekly sales of $50,000,000 of bills.

In addition, Mr. Morgenthau said, the Farm Credit Administration may offer not more than $100,000,000 of 5-year or less bonds some time this month. This offer will be for cash.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Motors, Steels and Stores Lead Stock Advance in Moderate Trading; Cotton and Wheat Decline; Government Bonds Sag.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, Aug. 8.—Stocks felt better and moved ahead a little, with some hesitation in a few groups. The ruling favorites of the speculator and investor alike managed to advance a good fraction to a point or two and some new high prices were established. Turnover in stocks was around one and a half million shares. Cotton fell more than a dollar a bale on the crop report and wheat lost a half-cent a bushel.

Stocks developed thin markets in some places, but most of the recognized leaders forged ahead. The steel share section strengthened considerably and for a while the rails were stimulated by the recovery in Union Pacific that followed the regular dividend vote. Motors revived. General Motors reached the best price since 1931. Mail order stocks improved, a few going to new tops. Public utilities were quiet. Rubbers, tobacco and silvers were slightly lower. Oils, chemicals and foods were irregularly lower.

Timken Detroit Axle and Electric Auto-Lite were the features of the motor accessory group. Aviation shares came in for a larger share of attention and some of them went into new high prices. American Hide & Leather preferred moved up more than 3 points more, as the reorganization plan became better known. The common was regarded less favorably. Mesta Machine added to its recovery. Tractions moved forward again. A feature was a 16-point jump in Omnibus preferred. Kelly Tire preferred, Munsingwear, National Enameling and Pittsburgh Steel preferred found little demand.

French Rate Cut.

Foreign exchange markets were kept well under control. In spite of the riots in France, the direct result of tightening the belt of inflation another notch, the Bank of France reduced its discount rate again, from 3½ to 3 per cent, as an expression of confidence in the gold position and as an attempt to help industry by a "reflation" of credit. France has the resources to stay on gold and to avoid devaluation of the franc for a long time, during which inflation may take place in the rest of the world.

The final outcome of the attempt of the gold bloc countries to stay on gold and avoid devaluation lies in the resistance of the public. Just when the point will be reached at which decline in export industries and wage reductions cannot be borne, or will be considered as an effort not worth the goal of inflation avoidance, no one can tell. However, the time may come when even the French rentier decides that his income and value of bonds held is suffering more from the government's forced reduction in interest than they might be hurt by some inflation. Francs were firm and sterling was a little higher.

This week's statement of the Bank of France shows a large increase in gold, but circulation also rose sharply. Bank of England expanded its circulation, laid to the holiday needs. Money markets remained dull and low.

Bond Market Upset.

The Government bond market, expecting an auction of Treasury notes, was momentarily stunned by Secretary Morgenthau's announcement that another $100,000,000 of 2⅞ per cent long-term bonds would be shoved out next week. With the market for bonds decidedly sour, the price of the 2⅞ crumbled badly, the quotation by afternoon being more than a quarter of a point under the average level at which the last block of bonds was bid for. In the state of mind the market was in this afternoon dealers were wondering where the $100,000,000 bids would come from next week, and when they came, what would be the average price. It was observed that the Secretary of the Treasury likes to do the unexpected, even if it costs money.

Another indication of industrial activity was given by the sales report for July of General Motors. The gain over a year ago encouraged the hope that the extraordinary activity in May and June was not a flash in the pan. The cotton crop estimate around noon had a depressing effect on the price, but no great loss was sustained. The Government guessed this year's crop at 11,798,000 bales, compared with a consensus of private estimates of 11,500,000 bales.

Reserves Rise To New Peak, Aided by Gold

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 8.—Gold imports and Treasury operations combined to lift member bank reserves at New York and throughout the country to another new peak in banking history in the week ended Wednesday, Federal Reserve weekly statements made public today revealed.

At New York reserves with the regional institution rose $10,000,000 to $2,132,000,000, while for the country as a whole the rise was $15,000,000 to 5,115,000,000. Approximately half of the reserve total is in excess of legal requirements.

An increase in the Nation's monetary gold stock by $15,000,000 was a factor in the Reserve increase, as was the drawing down of $59,000,000 of Treasury deposits with the Reserve banks, most of which finds its way, after disbursement by the Treasury, into the deposits of member banks.

An increase of $31,000,000 in the country's supply of circulating currency to $5,550,000,000, following the usual seasonal trend, was more than offset in its effect on reserves by the rise in gold and the shifting of Treasury deposits.

At New York member institutions continued to lighten their portfolios of direct Government obligations, the decline being $71,000,000, to $3,103,000,000. A considerable portion of the funds was shifted to other uses, including an increase in loans on securities of $11,000,000, a rise of $6,000,000 in "other loans," which are mostly commercial, and a $13,000,000 increase in Treasury-guaranteed obligations. The net result, however, was a decline in total loans and investments of $44,000,000 on the week.

Estimate of 11,798,000 Bales 400,000 Over Private Figures.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 8.—A break of approximately $1.50 a bale in cotton futures today was attributed to selling influenced by higher Government crop figures than expected and uncertainty over Government crop loans this season.

October sold off from 11.41 to 11.02 and closed at 11.12 with the general market at net losses of 13 to 21 points.

There was a spurt of selling when business was resumed after the publication of the official crop figures pointing to a yield of 11,798,000 bales or about 400,000 bales above the average of recent private reports.

Active months broke about 33 to 40 points from the early highs under the midafternoon pressure. This met renewed trade buying or covering with last prices showing rallies of 8 to 11 points from the lowest.

Commission Sales Cut Wheat Price

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 8.—Selling by commission houses believed to be acting for Canadian interests did a good deal today to bring about lower prices here for wheat. It was emphasized as significant that at Eastern lake cities of the United States an import basis now prevails for high grade wheat from Canada. Rains in parts of Argentina, together with selling to anticipate any bearish surprise in the Washington Government crop report tomorrow tended also to weaken wheat values.

After falling 2⅛ cents a bushel, wheat closed at ¼-⅞ under yesterday's finish; September, 90¼@90¼; corn, unchanged to ¾ lower; September, 75¼-75½; oats, ⅛-½ off, and provisions unchanged to 50 cents down.

On the Air Today

Al Pearce and His Gang go "big-time" tonight. And in case you're a Pearce day-time fan, be it understood the matinees each Monday through Thursday will be continued as usual.

All the gang will be on hand at Radio City for the premiere of the popular West Coast show at 9:30 from WRC, including the Three Cheers, Mable Todd and Harry Foster, soloists; Ed and Zeb, the Corn Center grocers, and Tizzie Lish, the Home Beauty and Health Expert.

And last but not least—Andy Andrews has rejoined the troupe after trailing all the way eastward from Los Angeles.

Spontaneity and "ad-libbing" will be the rule of the evening so there is practically no use speculating on which of Pearce's comedy acts will be used for the night-hour premiere.

A joint discussion of "Our Civil Liberties" will be aired by WJSV at 5 this afternoon with Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, and George Gordon Battle, New York attorney, engaging in the debate.

• • • •

WOL, through its affiliation with the Intercity network, brings a novel feature to Washingtonians tonight at 8:30. It's called "Grandma's Night Out," and boasts a mistress of ceremonies who has never uttered a syllable into a mike and not one performer under 60 years of age. Mrs. Emily Klein, a member of the "Three Score and Ten Club" of Brooklyn, will run the show with the assistance of Dick Fishel, producer. Fishel says it positively is not an amateur show. Many of the performers have had years of lecture platform and stage experience. "Grandma's Night Out" is expected to prove that the old-timers have a wallop left even at three-score or more.

Recently Ruth Etting was in Chicago and she and Irene Wicker, NBC's Singing Lady, swapped yarns over teacups. Now Miss Wicker is in New York and will be Miss Etting's guest on the College Prom show, WMAL, at 7:30 p. m. Interesting enough, Miss Etting will not be present to entertain her star guest. She's on the West Coast and Miss Wicker will be in Radio City! At 4:30 p. m., Miss Wicker will use Miss Etting's life story as a foundation for her Singing Lady broadcast.

The Beauty Box Theater inaugurates its Friday night series tonight, WMAL, at 8. Rose Bampton, Met contralto, has been selected for the inaugural production will will be "Love Me Forever," the Grace Moore motion picture success. Francisca White will be back from California to take part, too. This is the second adaptation of the Moore picture by the Beauty Box players, the first having been given last March. John Barclay sings the male lead.

Lots of "big names" on the air tonight. Dick Powell presents Clark Gable and Jean Harlow in "Hollywood Hotel," WJSV, at 8. By way of welcome, Powell will sing the title song of the new Gable-Harlow picture "China Seas." Frances Langford contributes "At Last," and Powell's numbers include "Paris in the Spring" and the old Vallee favorite, "A Little Kiss Each Morning."

The sprightly memo printed in this space yesterday was from Graydon Walker, who conducts the "Curbstone Queries" in front of The Post building two or three times a week. Graydon signed the memo but in some manner his name was in the "works." One of Walker's interview subjects Wednesday noon was Leo Carillo—and Bill McCormick the day before had a pair of celebrities from another of the local stage shows. They're keeping their eyes open for Lionel Barrymore or Leslie Howard next.

Aside to Mr. A. B. Aldridge, Charles Town, W. Va.: If Mr. Godfrey has a picture of himself, Judy and the new dog, I know he'll be glad to send you a copy. Consider the question asked of him.

$17,237,979 in Gold Here From Holland

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Gold shipments totaling $17,237,979 arrived today from Amsterdam, the largest single day's receipts since the current import movement began during the recent Dutch cabinet and financial crisis.

Arrivals of the metal so far total $46,512,979. Foreign exchange circles report further engagements of gold for shipment here are likely, as The Netherlands guilder continues below the level at which such imports are profitable.

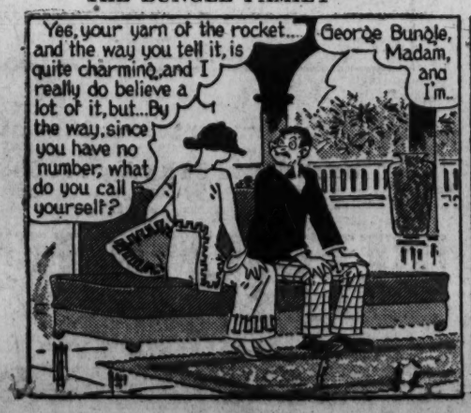
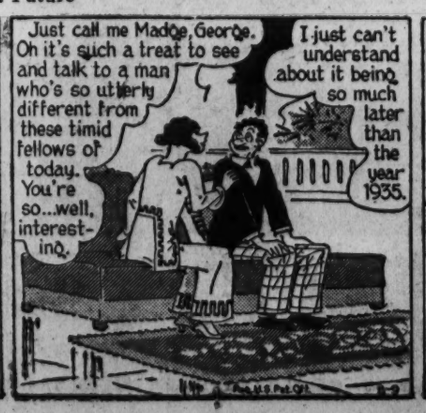
THE BUNGLE FAMILY — What a Future — By Harry J. Tuthill

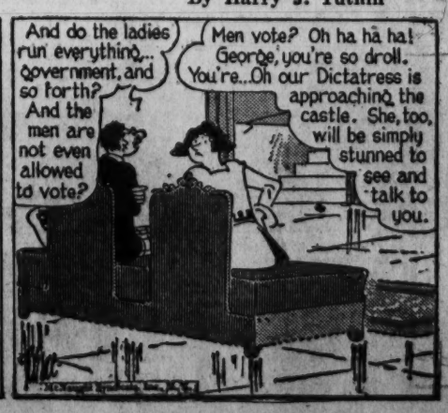


Yes, your yarn of the rocket... and the way you tell it, is quite charming, and I really do believe a lot of it, but... By the way, since you have no number, what do you call yourself?
George Bungle, Madam, and I'm..

George! Such an odd name. So....unusual. George! Ah, are you comfortable? Let me give you this pillow.
Yes mam, thank you.... Ah, did I understand that you're Secretary of State here, Miss.?



Just call me Madge, George. Oh it's such a treat to see and talk to a man who's so utterly different from these timid fellows of today. You're so...well, interesting.
I just can't understand about it being so much later than the year 1935.



And do the ladies run everything... government, and so forth? And the men are not even allowed to vote?
Men vote? Oh ha ha ha! George, you're so droll. You're...Oh our Dictatress is approaching the castle. She, too, will be simply stunned to see and talk to you.

WHO CAN DO IT?

DO WHAT?

"Fix that roof. Every rainstorm means work for me and more stains on the ceiling in our bedroom."

Well, my dear, that's simple. If you'll just turn to the classified section of your morning Post you will find your very question "Who Can Do It?" in big, bold type, and right under it the names of some roofers. Then all you have to do is use the phone—simple?

Courtney Ryley Cooper's '10,000 Public Enemies'

Chapter XXVI.—Machine Gun Death

It is an hour's ride from Benton, Ark., to Hot Springs, Ark. As had happened in Benton, the police of Little Rock, innocently enough, stopped the car. Again the captors of Frank Nash were forced to show their credentials. By this time wariness had developed.

"Which way are you going?" the local officers asked.

"Well," the special agents replied, "we figure we'll make it to Joplin."

The Little Rock police personally escorted the car to the Joplin road, where they left it. Then, back at headquarters, they answered a call from Hot Springs, to hear a voice inquiring if anything had been heard of those kidnapers.

"They're no kidnapers," came the reply. "They're Federal and State officers, with an escaped prisoner named Frank Nash. They're taking him back to Leavenworth."

"Which way are they going?"

"They took the Joplin road out of here."

It was partly this evidence which caused Galatas, owner of the White Front in Hot Springs, where Nash was captured, to become a fugitive from justice. That call had come from the Galatas home. Immediately afterward, Galatas and Mrs. Nash chartered an airplane and flew to Joplin. He had sent word to Herb Farmer to meet him, and that something must be done to free Frank Nash. But on his arrival, Galatas and Farmer searched in vain for the prisoner. Good reason. The officers had started out on the Joplin road, leaving the impression in Little Rock that they were going to that city. However, 30 miles out, at a cut-off, they had switched over to the road leading to Fort Smith, Ark.

Now there was much excitement in the house of Herb Farmer. They telephoned the O. P. Inn, only to find that Doc Stacci was out playing golf with Machine Gun Jack McGurn. Messengers were sent for him. The news traveled over the wire that good old Jelly at last had fallen into the Federal net. Doc Stacci tried to pass the news on to Kansas City; by this time word had come from Hot Springs that the supposed route of the officers into Joplin had been a blind and that Nash really was being taken through Fort Smith, Ark., and by train to Kansas City.

Thus calls crisscrossed until late in the afternoon, Joplin to Chicago to Kansas City, for a long time without success.

Verne Miller was discovered on a golf course. Then, with the news that his old partner at last had been caught, he hurried away to desperate things. He called Chicago, inquiring if any of the gang there could come down and help him. There is evidence that a crowd started, armed with machine guns and automatics, but for some reason did not reach Kansas City. He called St. Paul and asked for the Barker boys or Karpis. The evidence hints that Pat Reilly answered the telephone.

"The boys aren't here," was the answer. "They're busy."

"The Boys" Go In for New Kind of Money

"Busy? Where?" Miller was in a hurry. "I've got to get hold of them."

"I don't think you can. Nobody's seen the boys for several days."

"Where've they gone?"

"I dont know. Nobody knows." Then: "Say, haven't you seen what's smeared over the front pages of all the newspapers?"

Verne hung up the phone. He had seen the news from St. Paul. Everybody had seen it. One of the biggest kidnapings in a century had just occurred there. So "the boys" had gone in for that kind of money!

Verne Miller was blocked. A big-timer like him, faced with the job of rescuing friends. And he had to go out and borrow a couple of killers to do it!

The story of that loan comes from three sources. One was a man named Jimmy LaGapra, alias Jimmy Needles. A second was a man now a convict. The third source was Verne Miller himself, as he later explained it to his glowering friends of gangdom, wholly unfriendly now that the hunt was on.

According to Verne, he went downtown, searching in vain for aid. He knew that the officers would be armed only with ordinary weapons, and he believed that any man equipped with a mere automatic or sawed-off shotgun would be sensible in the face of a machine gun. If he could only find two or three good mobsters who could slam down the muzzle of such a gun and appear to mean it, the freeing of Frank Nash should be a simple matter.

Early that morning Sheriff Jack Killingsworth, of Bolivar, Mo., had been called to a garage which was run by a brother of Adam Richetti, a pal of Pretty Boy Floyd. Richetti and Floyd had a number of persons lined up against a wall and were threatening to shoot anyone who moved. The sheriff likewise met misfortune. Pretty Boy Floyd ordered him into a car. Then, with the sheriff as a hostage, Richetti and Floyd moved out of town. They proceeded thus until they reached Osceola, Mo., where they decided to change cars. This they did by flagging an insurance man, stepping in with him and taking the sheriff also, now becoming the possessor of two victims. The journey continued until late at night, when they entered Kansas City by way of Kansas City, Kans., and took a side cut from a viaduct which connects the two towns. There Floyd got out of the car, disappeared a few moments, and returned, followed by an automobile and driver. Into it he transferred two machine guns and a steamer trunk. The bandits said good-by to their hostages and told them to get to hell away from there.

And They Came Back Without Frank Nash

It was these men, so the stories go, that Verne Miller met that night, for the first time in his life, and took to his home on Edgevale road. Then he went to the Union Station and checked the arrival of trains. Following this the telephone rang in the Farmer home. It was Verne. Mrs. Nash answered, still sobbing, as she had been sobbing most of the day. It disgusted Verne. He was a man of repression.

"Oh, cut it out!" he said exasperatedly. That was rough language for Verne Miller. "You'll have Jelly back in the morning."

Morning came. Verne Miller and his two guests left home in Verne's Chevrolet. After a time they returned without Frank Nash. They spoke but little. Floyd stumbled upstairs and flopped on a bed, nursing an injured shoulder. The third man wandered about the house, hands in pockets, or rubbing them slowly before him. Verne Miller bandaged a wounded finger.

Food had been prepared. They could not eat it. They could only look and turn away. The coffee they raised in shaking hands, drinking sparingly and then uncertainly setting down the cup. At last Verne's woman asked:

"What's wrong with you, Sugar?"

The man's jaw fell, remaining open for a long moment. He looked away. At last he said:

"There was some shooting down at the station. And don't ask me any more about it!"

The plans of that morning had gone to pieces. The train bearing Frank Nash had come in on time. An officer had gotten out and looked about him. The train shed had been clear, except for William J. Grooms and Frank E. Hermanson, Kansas City detectives, Raymond J. Caffrey, special agent, and R. E. Vetterli, special agent in charge, down to meet the prisoner. Up the stairs they went with old Frank and along the 360-foot corridor which led to the street.

They started to load Frank Nash into the car, believing themselves in no danger. Hundreds of persons were nearby. Cabs came and went. The life of the Union Station flowed on all about them. Loaded shotguns were placed in the car. Guns rested in holsters. Frank Nash started to get into the rear seat. They moved him to the front; he sat under the wheel, awaiting final disposition. It was at this point that machine gunners stepped forth.

The car containing the attackers had been parked quite near the car of a special agent and the car containing the two detectives. The bandits had hidden there, awaiting the time for a getaway. Now they moved swiftly into position, surrounding the police car.

"Get 'em up!" shouted Floyd. "Up—up—up!"

Of seven men threatened with death, not one obeyed the command. Every officer reached for his gun. Hermanson shot twice. It maddened Floyd.

"Give it to 'em!" he shouted, and the faithful engineers of crime's underground railroad hastened to obey. Bandit machine guns went into action. Carey, Nash, Grooms, Hermanson and Reed were killed instantly. Vetterli and Lackey were wounded. The only man who escaped death unharmed was Special Agent Smith, who queerly enough had taken Nash's place in the rear seat.

The bandits did not know that. A machine gunner stuck his head through the shattered car windows. Before him was a tangled mass of lifeless sprawls; Smith's huddled body was covered by the bleeding forms of fellow officers. The killer swung his gun in excited command.

Mass Assassination Brought Law Change

"Frank's dead!" he shouted. "They are all dead! Scram!"

So, sick with blood, three men had scrammed, leaving behind them dead and wounded men, the assassination of whom was to change laws, and bring about even greater activities against lawlessness by the Bureau of Investigation. But even this drama, now that living men had become corpses, was static beside a scene in Joplin, Mo.

It takes a certain amount of credulity to believe it. But Mrs. Nash, even today, insists that she never, at any time, knew her husband was an escaped convict or anything worse than an ordinary bootlegger. She says that she did not know his real name was Frank Nash, but thought it was Frank Harrison—the alias he used when they first met.

So, after the fevered hours in Hot Springs, the airplane ride to Joplin, the waiting, the telephoning, the uncertainty, the night of troubled sleep, Frances Nash, who, in all her association with gangdom, never could quite forget that she once had been a school teacher, rose from the breakfast table to the knowledge that the radio had suddenly ceased its usual advertising exhortations. There was an evidence of strain in the announcer's voice:

"Four officers were instantly killed and two wounded at Union Station Plaza early today, when gangdom attempted to liberate from their custody an escaped Federal prisoner named Frank Nash. In the burst of machine-gun fire, with which the attacking outlaws swept down the gallant police officials, Frank Nash himself also fell, instantly slain by the terrific fire."

Mrs. Nash looked toward those about her—the neighboring wife of a former convict; Herb Farmer, cupping his ear to the loud speaker; Esther, ghastly gray beside him.

"Frank Nash?" she asked. "Who's he?"

"The man you married, dearie," said her neighbor.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Peacock Alley

New York, Aug. 8.

Winners and new champs in the Broadway Beauty Sweepstakes this season are the professional models, the stunning creatures who decorate the billboards from the rock-ribbed coast of Maine to the sun-kissed slopes of California . . . I run into these breath-takers all over town on my nightly rounds . . . The setting invariably is the same—soft lights, sweet music, champagne, caviar, a young millionaire and a slim, streamlined model . . . I meet them at the Central Park Casino, at the Westchester Bath Club, at the Westchester Country Club, on the roof of the Waldorf, atop the St. Regis, at "21," at the Atlantic Beach Club . . . They cover a lot of ground, and they cover it in elegant fashion . . . What it takes, they've got—chic, allure, the curves of a Lefty Gomez . . . The No. 1 model of the town is Gwili Andre, a bit of Danish pastry.

• • • •

Miss Andre has been paid as high as $50 an hour to pose for a cigarette ad, and just how many accidents have been caused along the Federal highways by this exotic "looker" is open to speculation . . . A driver can be pardoned a swerve when he rounds a sharp curve and finds this Danish siren blowing smoke rings from a billboard . . . She is the Garbo of all the professional models, this Andre number . . . Gwili often yearns to be alone, gets tired of posing, and when these moods come upon her, irate advertising agencies tear their hair out and scream in anguish, for on these occasions, Miss Andre's price goes sky-rocketing . . . Only models in the Andre class are Betty Wyman and Mary Taylor . . . Miss Taylor, however, doesn't enter into any rivalry with the "pros" . . . Daughter of Bert Taylor, one of the stock exchange governors, niece of Countess di Frasso, theater companion of George Jean Nathan, the tall, slender, young society miss poses only for Vogue fashions.

• • • •

Texas, according to John Robert Powers, is most prolific in producing beauties . . . Janice Jarratt, Betty Lomax and Dorothy Phillips all come from the Lone Star State . . . Powers, a good-looking Irishman from Easton, Pa., is really the Ziegfeld of the model industry . . His office at 247 Park avenue, a stone's throw from Grand Central Terminal, is the greatest clearing house in the profession . . . Some of his early models were Fredric March, Norma Shearer, Barbara Stanwyck, Dolores Costello, Madge Evans, Mae Clark, Kay Francis and Constance Cummings . . . He tells me that the standards of beauty are so rigid today that the Venus de Milo, Cleopatra and Helen of Troy would be thumbed out of his office if they applied for work . . . "Cleopatra," he said grudgingly, "might get a job modeling foundation garments" . . . These are corsets and other unmentionables, and the top-flight models would not consider posing for 'em . . . I'm not surprised that he'd reject the Venus de Milo . . . It's hardly news when an armless lady is turned away empty-handed.

• • • •

Measurements of Frances Joyce, brown-haired lovely, are typical of the select group . . . Size, 14; bust, 31; shoes, 6-C; height, 5 feet 9½; waist, 25½; hose, 9½; weight, 125 lbs.; hips, 35; hat, 22; gloves, 6¾ . . . At this point, I can see thousands of you girls dropping this paper and rushing for a tape measure . . . If I'd been smart, I would have printed the measurements later in the column . . . So much for the proportions of a model . . . In addition, she must have a certain freshness in her face, a certain breeding . . . Powers frowns upon heavy make-up, detests types that are theatrical . . . He was elated on the afternoon I talked to him . . . He had found a girl who was a "natural." Her name is Jane Davis, from New Rochelle, N. Y., and she'd been working as a stenographer at the Madison avenue offices of Borden's . . . The odds are 1,000 to 1 against a girl landing with Powers . . . The little stenographer, however, clicked fast.

• • • •

Miss Andre is the No. 1 model of the profession . . . Behind her come Betty Wyman and Mary Taylor . . . Right behind this trio must be grouped Janice Jarratt, Elsie Little, Martha Muzzy, Frances Joyce, Betty McLauchlen, Bab Shanton, Catherine Arms, Anita Couhan, Charlotte Young, Jessie Shanks, Betty Russell, Camille Bartlett, Lillian Kenton, Mimi Richardson, Barbara Beckwith, Jane Powell, Beatrice Cole, Bunny Hartley, Ruth Coleman, Minerva Fedyn, Kitty Barrett, Beatrice Hudson, Peggy Laden, Libby Harben, Alice Lorraine and Ethelyn Holt . . . It was Miss Holt who achieved national fame wearing that mannish hat in the cigarette ads . . . Anton Bruehl, one of the great photographers of the town, originally made the picture for a magazine . . . The horrified mag editors turned it down, saying that he had made the girl appear so mannish that it was repulsive . . . Camel saw it, liked it, used it, and the ad became a sensational success.
